Post-War Program

Naval War College

By VICE ADM. DONALD B. BEARY, USN
President Naval War College

IN February 1949 the Navy will select a group of officers of demonstrated ability to attend the next 10-month course at the Naval War College. This course will start at Newport, Rhode Island, on 12 August, 1949.

Here, while free from the pressure of everyday military duties, the selected officers will study the art and science of war in its broadest aspects. Through the study and solution of military problems they will have the opportunity to improve their ability to think, to increase their professional stature, and thus to prepare themselves for the duties and responsibilities of high command. Any officer fortunate enough to be selected for this assignment can look forward to one of the most interesting and profitable years of his entire career.

Perhaps it is significant that when the Naval War College was established in 1884 the Industrial Revolution was just hitting its stride. The full impact of steam, electricity and the internal combustion engine was only beginning to be felt. There followed a swift march of scientific and industrial events that brought with it the telephone, radio and the fulfillment of Man's long urge to fly. This, coupled with the development of mass armies, powerful navies of great mobility, great air fleets, and later, atomic energy, has resulted in revolutionary changes in the techniques of warfare. The total effect of all these factors threatens to overwhelm military thought and cause it to lose pace. The military student is tempted to become so preoccupied with the study of technical developments in weapons that he is in danger of losing his breadth of vision. Under these circumstances military thinkers may forget that weapons are merely the implements of war and ignore the continued need for a profound understanding of the overall strategy of war. They may overlook the fact that, throughout the remarkable scientific and industrial advance of the past few generations, two factors have remained constant—the human mind and the geography of the globe.

The mind of Man is still the motivating force behind all weapons, and our preoccupation with atomic energy should not blind us to this fact. The pattern of future victories and defeats will continue to originate in that imperfect human machine which has followed much the same pattern of behavior since Man first

Board Picks 947 To Be Regular Army Majors

(See Page 459 for details concerning temporary promotions for Army officers.)

The Army this week announced the selection of 947 permanent captains to be permanent majors, effective 1 Jan. 1949, chosen from among 1040 candidates considered.

One chaplain—No. 1 on the Chaplains Corps permanent captain promotion list—was also selected for promotion. He is Lt. Col. Palmer P. Pierce.

Selection of 947 officers from a group of 1040 considered means that there were 93 passovers, or 8.9 per cent.

Last week's ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL carried the list of 527 permanent majors advanced to the rank of permanent lieutenant colonel and the names of four chaplains promoted also to be lieutenant colonels. The successful majors were selected from 588 names, which meant that there were 60 passovers. (One officer died subsequent to completion of the selection board study.)

The list of 5509 permanent captains on the Army promotion list was published in the 16 Oct. issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

Slated for early release—probably this month—is the list of permanent first lieutenants selected for promotion to the rank of permanent captain.

Maj. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe was president of the board which selected the captains for permanent promotion to major. Other members were Col. Bertram F. Hayford, Col. Ernest A. Bixby, Col. Paul (Please turn to Page 469)

Congress May Restudy Navy Flag Selections

(List of Naval Officers selected to be captains is on page 463 of this issue)

Rising Congressional concern over the severity of the recent Navy selections to the grade of rear admiral will probably bring requests from the Committees on Armed Services for some explanation from the Department.

It also likely will result in holding up action in the Senate on nominations based on the list until the committee members are convinced of the wisdom of the board's action in passing over so many captains.

It is pointed out that the law provides (in Section 109) that "from among eligible officers junior in lineal rank to the junior officer in the appropriate promotion zone in a grade below that of captain, the board may not recommend, as best fitted for promotion, a number exceeding five per centum of the total number that the board is authorized to recommend for promotion."

While the above provision does not apply to the captain's grade, many members feel that the board by going so far beyond the figure set as a limit in all the other lower grades did not abide by the spirit of the law. Instead of limiting their selections below the promotion zone to a maximum of five per cent the board picked, out of a total of 24 selections, 15 (Please turn to Page 463)

Yuletide Greetings

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL extends its best wishes to all members of the Armed Forces for a very Merry Christmas and a New Year in which the Services will be strengthened for their task of preserving the peace. We are pleased to transmit the following messages of greeting:

President Truman

"For your efforts in the task of bringing peace to the world, I express my own appreciation and that of the Nation which you represent and of which you are the valiant defenders. It is a source of deep satisfaction to me personally to know that in many parts of the world liberty-loving Americans are serving their country as ambassadors of good will and as exemplars of the freedom for which it stands.

"If we can help those less fortunate than ourselves to a better life, and to an understanding that democracy and its ideals have been dearly won and must be carefully (Please turn to Page 461)

Would Join Air Nat. Gd. To Air Force Reserves

Consolidation of the Air National Guard with the Air Force Reserve—proposed in the Gray Board Report—has been recommended to President Truman by Secretary of Defense James Forrestal.

The action is certain to stir strong protests from National Guard officials throughout the country and will be a topic of heated debate if proposed to Congress.

The Gray Board's plan for Federalization of the National Guard was not recommended "at this particular time" by Mr. Forrestal in his report to the President on the status of the National Military Establishment's Reserve Components.

Simultaneously, in moves designed to increase efficiency and decrease National Military Establishment costs, Secretary Forrestal announced this week the following developments:

1. Approval of a Joint Chiefs of Staff decision to consolidate all sea transport services under the Navy. The transfer will not be abrupt, will probably require approximately one year for implementation.

2. Creation of a Weapons System Evaluation Group to "provide rigorous, unprejudiced and independent analyses and evaluations of present and future weapons systems under probable future combat conditions."

3. Unification of recruiting facilities and services to include joint use by the Army, Navy and Air Force of office space where practicable, consolidation of medical examining facilities where practicable and simplification and standardization of administrative forms. Eventually, the Secretary said, a combined Recruiting Service may be established.

Mr. Forrestal told a press conference also that General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower, now president of Columbia University, "will continue to act in a consultative and advisory capacity on general matters pertaining to the National Military Establishment." General Eisenhower was in Washington this week (Please turn to Page 461)

Report to Hoover Unit Urges Stronger NME

In the opinion of a Special Task Force of the Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, our National Security Organization is soundly constructed but is not working well. This conclusion was expressed in a long and exhaustive report of the committee, which, though made public this week, has not yet been approved by the full commission.

The special committee under the chairmanship of Ferdinand Eberstadt of New York made a large number of specific recommendations for improvement in the functioning of the Military Establishment. Many of these are designed to strengthen the authority of the Secretary of Defense over the military departments and other security agencies.

The committee advocated equalization of remuneration between the Services and a reasonable increase in pay, particularly in the officer category, which it was pointed out had only a small increase in many years.

No drastic changes in the structural organization of the National Military Establishment were suggested. The committee rejected a proposal to merge the Departments of the Army, Navy, and Air Force in a single Department of Defense. It turned down the suggestion that a single Chief of Staff be named for all three services. It declined to recommend the transfer of Naval aviation to the Air Force. Some of the members of the committee dissented from the action taken on these proposals.

Judge Robert P. Patterson, former Secretary of War, declined to sign the report and submitted a dissenting memorandum. He strongly advocated the complete merger of the Army, Navy and Air Force in a single department, with a senior military officer as Chief of Staff of the three Armed Forces, subject only to the direction of the President and the Secretary of Defense. He favored abolishing the office of Chief of Staff to the Commander in Chief, which he termed "an historical accident."

The committee recommended that an (Please turn to Page 483)

Air Force Permanent Promotions

Air Force officials disclosed late this week that permanent promotions to the ranks of lieutenant colonel, major and captain will be made on a group basis on 1 Jan. 1949.

This means that the Air Force promotions will be made in the same manner as those of the Army, with all officers selected receiving simultaneous advancement to existing vacancies.

The Air Force selection board considering officers for advancement to these three permanent ranks is expected to finish its deliberations next week. When released, the lists of officers promoted will be published in their entirety in the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL.

Meantime, Air Force personnel officials said that criteria for temporary promotions to Major have been drafted but have not yet received final approval.

Washington Post—"Superficially there is much to commend Lt. Gen. James H. Doolittle's proposal for an amalgamation of the Air Force and the Navy's air arm. There is no doubt that the Navy Air Force feud has been one of the worst jokers in unification . . . The first step in a cure, it seems to us, is for the definitions of function reached at Key West and Newport to be implemented authoritatively and unmistakably. If each service will do its job without looking for new fields to encroach upon, much of the trouble will vanish. Who mans the planes is not so important as that they operate according to a single over-all plan."

Houston Chronicle—" . . . The one military factor that remains constant is man power. Weapons and tactics may change, but wars are still fought by men equipped with the best weapons . . . May it not, therefore, be asked whether the high command is not clinging to outworn weapons which could be curtailed with more safety than the draft and training of man power? . . . Let the economy in preparedness—and such there must be—fall first on obsolete weapons and archaic minds."

Albuquerque Journal—"The three departments are now battling to grab off a larger share of the next defense budget. The Armed Services should not be gagged. But it is apparent that the public utterances of their officials are biased, permeated with selfishness and jealousy and should be controlled within reason. Each branch of the Service is issuing pressure stories. Secretary Forrestal has not been able to stop the bickering. It's about time that President Truman personally took over, knocked some hard heads together and demanded a brand of unity and cooperation that will build up rather than tear down our defense establishment."

San Francisco Chronicle—"A deliberate vendetta against Secretary Forrestal and the Defense Department is now being pursued by numerous interests, some of them left-wing and some not, but all with a knife ready to plunge into the back of this tough-minded, efficient Cabinet officer."

Boston Christian Science Monitor—"Action of the Army Department in halving its draft program will help focus needed attention on what the United States should pay for defense and how the sum should be divided among the Armed Services . . . We can sympathize with the Army. Compared with the more glamorous Navy and Air Force, its vital role often appears neglected. And unification permitted each arm to appeal to Congress. But competitive bidding by the Services for popular favor—and tax money—is not a sound way to shape the national defense . . . the Services should heed Secretary Forrestal's request that they reconcile their demands within the Defense Department."

Washington Star—"If our postwar Army can be molded successfully along the lines described by General Lanham it will take on a dignity and strength that no Army before it has possessed."

Mission of Army & AF Exchanges

In an address on the operation of the Army and Air Force Exchanges at the recent conference of Special Services Officers in Washington, D. C., Lt. Col. E. P. Hardenbergh, Washington representative of the Chief of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service, stressed the need for better understanding both inside and out of the service of the mission and function of Exchanges.

"We have two main goals," Colonel Hardenbergh said, "To provide items of convenience and necessity to soldiers and airmen and to provide for a standard uniform regular dividend so that the Army and Air Force obligation to provide welfare and recreational activities to its personnel may be realized."

Although Colonel Hardenbergh touched upon the various new programs instituted by the Exchange Service during the year such as the Merchandise Program, Employee Training Program, Equipment and Modernization program he laid greatest stress on the number of steps the Exchange Service has taken to eliminate abuse of the Exchange privilege and curb those infractions of regulations which irritate retailers associations.

"Serious attention has been given to this problem," Colonel Hardenbergh stated. "To create better understanding and to tighten up certain loose regulations which led to some abuses a two-fold program was instituted—directive and educational—immediate and long range."

Colonel Hardenbergh listed the regulations published in the past year to curb the possibility of abuse of Exchanges. They included the establishment of a domestic-wide Army and Air Force rigid identification card system; the requirement of written, signed sales slip for purchases over $5.00; checks by field personnel and a tightening up and redefining of items of merchandise which exchanges are permitted to stock.

The educational program has been aimed at educating customers, military and civilian, retailers and all who come in contact with the Exchange in the history, function, operation and benefits of the Exchange, the speaker said. This educational program consists of full size posters sent to all Exchanges for posting and monthly calendar-posters; feature stories in installation newspapers, lectures at the Special Service School at Fort Monmouth, N. J., the preparation of a proposed Armed Forces Talk on Exchanges and other informational projects of similar scope.

"The dual program has helped eliminate unacceptable practices" he stated. It has helped create an understanding by military and air personnel of the function and benefits of this half-century old privilege. Greater understanding of the Exchanges by the personnel it serves is a sound way to continued support of the exchange and gradually, though it will take time, to complete acceptance of the philosophy of Exchanges even by those groups now hostile to it."

Tracing the accomplishments of the past year, Colonel Hardenbergh, discussed the success of the system known as "centralization" which has assured post and base commanders a steady flow of regular dividends to underwrite a large part of the cost of entertainment and recreation at posts and bases. He also told the conferees that the centralization system enabled the Army and Air Force Exchanges to provide satisfactory and adequate service to National Guard Troops at summer training camps and mentioned that General Clifford Powell, Commanding General, New Jersey National Guard Units, complimented the Officer-in-Charge of the New York Regional Office on the service rendered. Similar compliments were extended by the Commanding General of the Wisconsin National Guard Division and the Adjutant General of that organization.

"The flexibility of the centralized exchange system facilitated the expansion of existing facilities and the establishment of new facilities, wherever necessary, to serve adequately approximately 200,000 National Guard troops," Colonel Hardenbergh stated.

In discussing centralization he added: "Through the cooperation of all concerned today there is a better and more efficient exchange service than ever before plus, for the first time in the history of the Army, a dependable flow of dividends for recreational purposes."

Signal School Graduates

Twenty-four Army and Air Force officers, including one representing the British Army, were graduated from the Advanced course of the Signal School, Ft. Monmouth, N. J. 9 Dec. The eleven-month course of study is the most advanced offered by the Signal Corps.

Brig. Gen. F. H. Lanahan, Jr., commanding general of the Post, addressed the exercises. Others who spoke were Col. H. G. Miller, commandant and Lt. Col. R. T. Nelson, director of the Officers' Department. Chaplain T. P. Finnegan, pronounced the invocation and Chaplain W. C. Barnhouse, delivered the benediction. Music was provided by the Fort Monmouth Band.

The graduates:

Lt. Col. James Corr, Jr., and Gerald Carisle, Signal Corps; Lt. Col. Walter F. Dix, Air Forces.

Majors William M. Coeyman, Forrest V. Diehl, Edwin G. Fritz, Mandel N. Goldstein, Marcus W. Heskett, George Metcalfe, Ted W. Peterson, Cecil L. Tune, Signal Corps, and Maj. R. H. J. Rowntree, British Army.

Captains William H. Brauer and Fred H. Steckhahn, Air Force; Captains Emile M. Daniel, George E. Green, Charley W. Haynes, Harry Longerich, Arthur J. Sebesta, Daugherty M. Smith, Lynnford S. Wilson, Signal Corps; Capt. Robert F. Doolin, Signal Corps Reserve.

Operation "Sleighbell"

The Air Force has organized "Operation Sleighbell" to insure prompt air delivery of Christmas parcels and cards by 25 Dec. between all Air Force and Navy personnel on the Berlin airlift operation whose dependents live in other overseas areas.

A C-47 loaded with mail originating in Europe will leave Rhine-Main Air Force Base 16 Dec. and proceed to Brookley AFB, Mobile, Ala., to meet aircraft of other commands and exchange mail on 19 Dec. Then the planes will return with their loads of Christmas packages to the Pacific, the Far East, Hawaii, Alaska, the Canal Zone, and Germany.

Coed AF OCS

The Air Force's Officer Candidate School at Lackland AFB, San Antonio, Tex., will become coeducational on 10 Jan. when 25 WAF candidates report for studies with a group of 250 men.

This marks the first time that the Air Force will train its own women officers, who will be commissioned as second lieutenants in the Reserve after completing the six months' course.

Only exception for the female officer candidates from the regular curriculum will be their dismissal from extensive field maneuvers. In all other respects, their training will be identical with that taken by the male officer candidates.

Similarly, entrance examinations are the same for women as for men. They must be at least 20½ years of age but not over 28½ years; have at least two years of college or pass an equivalent examination, be of high moral character; a citizen of the U. S.; and agree to serve at least three years upon completion of the course of training.

Secy. Royall Meets Leaders

Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall this week conferred with top military and diplomatic officials in Europe obtaining first-hand information on such vital issues as the Western Union Defense Pact, the Berlin airlift and the war against the Communist guerrillas in Greece.

Secretary Royall met with U. S. Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas in London and also with Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery. While in England, he inspected two Air Force bases and was to see Generals Sir Brian Robertson of Britain and Joseph Pierre Koenig of France during his stay in Germany.

Secretary Royall and Mrs. Royall were to be the guests of General Lucius D. Clay and Mrs. Clay for the Christmas holiday.

In addition to visiting England, Germany and Greece on his European inspection tour, Secretary Royall also will fly to Turkey, Trieste and France before returning to his post in Washington, where he will report his observations to the President.

Pay Report Next Week

Barring a last minute change in National Military Establishment plans, the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL next week will publish a detailed report on the conclusions of Secretary of Defense James Forrestal's Commission on Service Pay.

Officials in the Office, Secretary of Defense said late this week that the report has been signed by Commission members and will be made available next week.

Long awaited, the study is expected to provide the basis for all Service pay legislation before the 81st Congress.

Refuel Planes in Air

The Air Force has announced that for some time it has been modifying B-29s and B-50s to enable those aircraft to be refueled in the air, and also has been modifying B-29s to be used as refueling tankers. The Air Force will not announce how many of each type have been modified.

Reserve Retired Pay

As the Services readied official regulations to cover retired pay for Reservists with 20 years creditable service who are 60 years and over, two Reserve organizations this week prepared to contest decisions of the Comptroller General on this subject.

Brig. Gen. William C. Lewis, of the Air Reserve Association, said his group would file suit in Federal Court in Washington—probably shortly after 1 Jan. 1949—to obtain a "declaratory judgment" on the legislation authorizing retired pay to Reservists.

Particularly in question is the Comptroller General's decision that a candidate for the retired payments must belong to a Reserve component at the time he reaches the age of 60.

Similarly, Brig. Gen. E. A. Evans, Executive Director of the Reserve Officers Association, has requested an interview with Mr. Lindsay Warren, the Comptroller General, and said his association is contemplating court action also to revise the Comptroller's decisions.

Falling success in these actions, it is believed that the Reserve Officers Association will press for Congressional action.

As reported in the 27 Nov. issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, when the Comptroller General ruled against payments to the group of individuals who completed all requirements for retirement benefits except attainment of the age of 60 years prior to separation from a Reserve component, he said:

"The question is of grave importance and if the considerable doubt that exists is to be resolved against the interests of the Government, it is the view of this office that it should be resolved by the Congress and not by interpretation."

2 Million Miles of Arctic Flying

Ten thousand hours and 2,000,000 miles of Arctic flying has been completed by the 72d Photo Reconnaissance Squadron. It was recently announced by Lt. Col. Charles S. Overstreet, Commanding Officer. This historic moment in the annals of the organization was reached by a squadron Superfort, "Overexposed," after returning from a routine photographic mission in northern Alaska.

Airplane Commander of the craft on the epic mission was Lt. Walter B. Molloy. Lt. John B. McClung, acted as pilot. Other members of the crew who participated were Lt. Edward M. Hollacher, navigator; Lt. Gustav Fenske, navigator; Lt. William L. Merrill, navigator; Lt. John T. O'Connor, radar observer; Lt. John H. Allison, radar observer; T. Sgt. Thomas J. Banks, flight engineer; T. Sgt. Michael E. Rivera, radio operator; Cpl. William B. Edwards, observer; T. Sgt. Leo Downer, electrical mechanic gunner; S. Sgt. James M. Flagg, photographer; S. Sgt. A. M. Hodges, photographer; and Cpl. Benjamin A. Coccia, observer.

The 72d, first B-29 photographic unit to operate from an Alaskan base, has pioneered in the many phases of Arctic aviation, notably those of navigation and radar. Methods developed and perfected by the squadron in the two and a half years of its operations from Ladd Air Force Base near Fairbanks, have led to entirely new concepts of polar flying.

Temporary Promotions In Army To Be Resumed

The Army this week revealed plans to promote 1832 Regular and non-Regular officers to higher temporary ranks early next year—the first temporary promotions to be made since March, 1947.

A total of 561 captains will be advanced to the rank of major and 1120 first lieutenants will win captain's bars. Additionally, for the respective ranks, 281 captains will be placed on an eligible list for promotion when vacancies develop and 560 first lieutenants will be earmarked also for future promotions.

Army officials said that due to lack of vacancies, no temporary promotions will be made at this time in the grades of colonel and lieutenant colonel except for Medical Department officers and Chaplains.

In the latter services, the Army said, a total of 45 officers will be made colonels, with an additional 23 selected for inclusion on the eligible list.

As for promotions to the grade of lieutenant colonel, a combined total of 106 Medical Department officers and Chaplains will be selected for promotion and 53 others will be placed on the eligible list.

Altogether, approximately 900 officers in the various ranks will be placed on the eligible list, to be promoted when vacancies occur.

Meantime, it was learned that the Army has radioed commanders in the field seeking recommendations for officers, Regulars and non-Regulars, who fall within the "zones of consideration" listed below.

Field commanders were instructed to submit their recommendations to Washington by 15 Jan. 1949. Presumably, selection boards will be convened during the latter part of January to consider officers for the temporary promotions.

Selections for temporary promotions from captain to major, from major to lieutenant colonel, and from lieutenant colonel to colonel will be made by Boards convened by the Department of the Army. These Boards will consider all eligible officers regardless of their geographical location in the United States or at overseas stations.

Major Army Commands have been authorized to promote first lieutenants to the temporary grade of captain within quotas stipulated by the Department of the Army. There is no change in the procedure of promoting second lieutenants to the grade of first lieutenant by the major Army Commands. Second lieutenants become eligible for consideration for promotion after having spent a minimum of 18 months in grade.

For consideration for temporary promotion from captain to major, all Regular Army officers must have completed 9 or more years' service for promotion purposes as of 31 Dec. 1948. All non-Regular officers serving in the grade of captain who have temporary dates of rank as of December, 1942, or earlier will be included in the zone of consideration.

Regular Army officers serving in the grade of first lieutenant who have four or more years' service for promotion purposes as of 31 Dec. 1948, and non-Regular officers who have temporary dates of rank as of June 1944 or earlier, will be eligible for consideration for promotion to the rank of captain.

The number of years of service for Regular officers and the date of rank of non-Regular officers in the Medical Department required for inclusion in the zone of consideration for temporary promotion purposes are shown in the following table:

Grade in which serving	Years of Service	Temporary Date of Rank
Regular Officers	Non-Regular Officers

Army officials said that retired Regular Army officers on active duty will be considered with non-Regular officers according to date of rank of the grade in which serving.

With regard to the temporary promotion of officers from the rank of first lieutenant to captain, the following quotas were established for promotions and for selection to an eligibility list for future advancement:

Command	Pro- motions	Select for Eligibility List
First Army	37	18
Second Army	67	33
Third Army	69	34
Fourth Army	51	25

First lieutenants of Army Administration Area, Military District of Washington, or on duty with the Air Force, or in Class II installations, and officers of Chief of Technical and Administrative Services will be chosen for promotion by Department of the Army selection boards.

Eligibles are all Regular officers in the grade of first lieutenant with four or more years of promotion service on 31 Dec. and all non-Regulars with temporary rank as first lieutenants on 30 June 1944 or earlier.

Contract Cost Principles Issued

A new section of the Armed Services Procurement Regulation, dealing with the types of costs which may be allowed in research and development, supply and material, and construction cost type contracts for the Army, Navy, and Air Forces, has been adopted by the three Departments after coordination by the Munitions Board.

The new Section XV, "Contract Cost Principles," becomes mandatory on 1 Feb. 1949. In general, the new section is based upon the principle that reasonable and necessary costs of performance should be allowed. In accordance with this precept, four major items not previously allowable in computing contract costs are now permissible. These are: State income taxes; use and occupancy insurance; ordinary local charity and community benefit donations; and charges for depreciation on fully depreciated assets. Advertising in trade and technical journals also is allowable on research and development, and supply and material cost type contracts.

Final approval of Section XV was given by the three Departments after it had been fully coordinated with industrial associations, accounting organizations, and other Government agencies. It was developed by the Armed Services Audit Coordination Committee, headed by Rear Admiral Frank Baldwin, USN, representing procurement cost accounting organizations of the Army, Navy, and Air Force; the Armed Services Procurement Regulation Ad Hoc Committee headed by Rear Adm. James D. Boyle, and the Procurement Policy Council, composed of Maj. Gen. Daniel Noce, of the Army; Rear Adm. M. L. Ring, of the Navy, and Major Gen. E. M. Powers, of the Air Force, representing the chief departmental procurement offices.

The adoption of this section is a further step in the development of uniform procurement regulations for all three departments, which was started early this year, in order to assure like treatment of procurement matters throughout the Armed Services.

When you move, notify the Army and Navy Journal of your change of address so you will not miss any issues.

Army-Navy Medical Procurement

Three years of successful operation by the Armed Services and a diligent effort to practice consolidation was the keynote of Anniversary Day ceremonies at the Army-Navy Medical Procurement Office in Brooklyn, N. Y., on 15 Dec.

This installation has been discharging its mission of central procurement and quality control of all medical supplies used by the Army, Navy, and Air Force on a joint single-operation basis since 1945.

It is a consolidation of the former Army Medical Purchasing Office and the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery's Purchasing Section.

This agency is responsible for a $50,000,000 medical supply purchasing program for the current fiscal year, including certain foreign-aid procurement.

Its laboratory, the equipment of which is valued at $500,000, has performed over 25,000 tests in exercising quality control over its own medical materiel purchases and those of the Veterans Administration since its inception.

Col. Stuart G. Smith is ANMPO's commanding officer. The anniversary ceremonies included an inspection of its facilities in Brooklyn and at Fort Totten by Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, Army Surgeon General, Rear Adm. Clifford A. Swanson, Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery, and Maj. Gen. Malcolm C. Grow, the Air Surgeon. These officers also attended a dinner where local representatives of industry and officer and civilian personnel of ANMPO were also present. Admiral Swanson delivered the main address.

Hearing Aids Planned

Officers and enlisted personnel of the Army who are hard of hearing soon may be able to continue their active military careers.

Anxious to conserve the services of skilled officer and enlisted personnel, the Army shortly will issue regulations authorizing the retention in service of persons whose hearing difficulties can be corrected by mechanical aids.

It is understood that General Omar N. Bradley, Chief of Staff, and Lt. Gen. Willard S. Paul, Personnel and Administration chief, are much interested in the use of hearing aids for Army personnel.

They believe that experienced officers and enlisted personnel, who otherwise would be forced to retire, can continue to render outstanding service if their hearing can be corrected by hearing aids.

Army Officer Grade Adjustment

The Army has announced that officers recalled to extended active duty or ordered to active duty prior to 2 Sept. 1948, who previously served on active duty for a period of one year in the grade of lieutenant colonel with date of rank in that grade on or before 31 Dec. 1945, may submit request for restoration to the grade of lieutenant colonel if they are now serving in the grade of major.

Army commanders were told, however, that in any case where the character of service while on active duty in the lower grade has been such as to raise a question as to the fitness of the applicant for service as a lieutenant colonel, such information is to be reported in the forwarding endorsement.

Delay Promotion of Women

Army officials revealed this week that the temporary promotions of female officers will probably be made after male officers receive temporary advancements.

It is expected that details concerning the temporary promotions of female officers will be published around 1 January.

Meantime, it was expected that the list of Women's Army Corps (WAC) officers selected for Regular Army commissions would be available for publication in next week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL. Reports are that approximately 200 names are to be included on this list, marking the first integration of WAC officers in the Regular Army.

Last week, it was announced that Col. Mary Hallaren, WAC director, had been sworn into the Regular Army.

Medical Advisory Committee

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal has announced appointment of an Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee, with a membership of nine civilian leaders of the medical profession, the Surgeons General of the Army and Navy, and the Air Surgeon.

At the same time, Secretary Forrestal announced that Charles Proctor Cooper, President of the Board of Trustees of Presbyterian Hospital in New York City and formerly Vice President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, has accepted appointment as his Deputy for all medical matters affecting the National Military Establishment, and as chairman of the Armed Forces Medical Advisory Committee.

Members of the committee are:

Dr. Raymond B. Allen, of Seattle, President of the University of Washington.

Dr. Edward D. Churchill, Boston, Mass., Professor of Surgery, Harvard Medical School, and formerly President of the American College of Surgeons.

Dr. Michael DeBakey, Professor of Surgery, Baylor Medical College, Houston, Texas.

Dr. Paul R. Hawley, Chicago, Ill., formerly Chief Medical Director, Veterans Adminstration.

Dr. Richard D. Meiling, Assistant Professor of Obstetrics and Gynecology, School of Medicine, Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

Dr. Maurice C. Pincoffs, Professor of Medicine, University of Maryland, Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Howard A. Rusk, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Rehabilitation and Physical Medicine, New York University College of Medicine, and Medical Editor, New York Times.

Dr. Walter H. Scherer, Houston, Texas, Past President, American Dental Association.

Dr. Paul Titus, Pittsburgh, Pa., Secretary-Treasurer and Director, American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, M.C., USA, Surgeon General of the Army.

Rear Adm. Clifford A. Swanson, M.C., USN, Surgeon General of the Navy and Chief of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery.

Maj. Gen. Malcolm C. Grow, M.C., USA, The Air Surgeon.

This Committee will serve in an advisory capacity to the Secretary of Defense on questions which affect the armed services as a whole in the fields of medicine and the allied professions. The Secretary, in a directive to the Committee, has asked it to submit recommendations on general policies and programs for the National Military Establishment as a whole, the development of medical and allied services capable of supporting the missions and needs of the armed services efficiently and effectively, the elimination of unnecessary duplications or overlappings in the medical departments of the armed forces, and the development of the maximum continuing cooperation and understanding between members of the civilian medical and allied professions and the armed services.

"The Committee shall concern itself with these matters," the Secretary's directive said, "not only as they relate to the armed forces in peacetime but also as they concern plans for mobilization in the event of any future national emergency."

In addition to advising the Secretary of Defense, the Committee was directed to give advice or assistance, on request, to the Secretaries of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force, the Chairmen of the Munitions Board and the Research and Development Board, or the head of any other board or agency in the National Military Establishment, on medical problems.

The new committee is expected to examine questions of basic policy affecting the Medical Departments of the armed forces, and thus will succeed, rather than supersede, the existing Ad Hoc Committee on Medical and Hospital Services (Hawley Board), which was set up on 30 Dec. 1947, to study, and make recommendations for improving the services provided by existing medical organizations in the National Military Establishment.

The chairman of this ad hoc committee, Maj. Gen. Paul R. Hawley, MC, USA-Ret., is one of the members of the new permanent advisory group. The Surgeons General of the Army and Navy and the Air Surgeon are the other members of the Hawley committee, which is expected to complete its work in January.

Evening Dress Uniform

The Army plans to issue regulations in the immediate future authorizing the optional wear of evening dress uniforms by male commissioned and warrant officers on appropriate occasions. The design has been approved by the Chief of Staff and the new uniforms may be worn as soon as the regulations are published.

The new Army evening dress uniform is similar to that of the Air Force announced some weeks ago. It is of black, or blue-black material, cut along the lines of civilian full dress clothes. It differs in some minor particulars from the special evening dress uniform of the Air Force.

Gold shoulder knots will be worn on the Army uniform but not by Air officers. A single gold loop constitutes the sleeve ornamentation of both uniforms, but the top of the Air officers' loop is pointed, whereas that of the Army is curved. The insignia of rank is on the sleeve at the base of the loop in both cases. There will be gold stripes on the trousers of Army uniforms, but not on those of the Air Force. No distinguishing insignia will be worn to designate the branch of the wearer. Miniature medals will be worn with this uniform.

Consideration is being given to the preparation of designs for various uniforms, including evening dress, for the women in the Army. In all probability some of the country's leading dress designers will be asked to assist the Quartermaster General in turning out smart new uniforms for the service women.

Pay Manual Prepared

Officials in the Office, Chief of Finance, this week were completing preparation of a manual describing details of the Army-Air Force pay procedures which will go into effect 1 July 1949.

The instructions are expected to be dispatched to the field late this month or early in January and expected to answer many queries now being addressed to the Office of Finance from the field.

Meantime, the Army and Air Force have ordered necessary machinery, forms and other equipment prior to implementation of the new pay plan.

As reported previously, the two Services have abandoned a proposal to pay officers and enlisted personnel twice a month and will continue the monthly pay days. Conservation of Finance personnel was the moving factor in this decision.

Other features of the new pay scheme—including replacement of cumbersome organization payrolls by issuance of individual pay cards—have been retained.

Many Finance officers ordered overseas are stopping by at Ft. Belvoir, Va., en route. There, a special Finance unit has been field testing new pay procedures prior to their world-wide adoption.

Parachutist's Badge

The Army has rescinded authority for wearing of the airborne cap insignia, but has announced that a forthcoming circular will authorize wearing of the arc tab over the division shoulder patch by airborne personnel and of regimental trimming for Ground Badges authorized in Section II, AR 600-70.

Army Permanent Lt. Cols.

Analysis of the Army's list of 527 permanent majors selected for promotion on 1 Jan. 1949 to the permanent rank of lieutenant colonel, published in last week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, reveals the following statistics:

Considered for promotion were 12 temporary colonels, 186 temporary lieutenant colonels and 396 majors. Of this number, seven colonels were selected for promotion, 151 lieutenant colonels and 370 majors. This is a total of 528 officers selected. One officer died after the board's findings were released.

Passed over or not considered—the 528 selections were made from only 588 names although No. 594 was the last chosen—were five colonels, 35 lieutenant colonels and 26 majors.

By branches the selection results were as follows:

	Selected	Passed	Total
QM (TC)	129	10	130
Inf (Cmp)	98	20	118
FA	46	8	54
Ord.	48	3	51
Eng.	38	10	48
AG	37	2	39
JA	33	—	33

Fin.	20	1	21
Cml	16	0	16
Cav.	9	2	11
PS	1	0	1
	528	66	594

As stated above, six of the officers listed as "passed" in this tabulation were not considered. The selection board reviewed the records of only 588 officers and selected 528.

Army Officer Designations

The Army has announced that career management control for officers of all components of the Army on active duty necessitates establishment of a new type of officer branch designation to be used on assignment orders and statistical reports.

Added to the basic, duty and carrier branch designations, there will now be the control branch. Here are the branch designations as explained in Circular 374:

Basic branch is defined in AR 606-145 and is that arm or service into which officers are assigned or appointed by the Department of the Army.

Duty branch is that arm or service in which an officer is currently performing duty.

Carrier branch is that arm or service to which officers of the Transportation Corps or Corps of Military Police are assigned by Department of the Army special orders pending legal establishment of these corps as basic branches.

Control branch is the arm or service corresponding to the branches of the Career Management Group, Personnel and Administration Division, General Staff, United States Army, responsible for the career planning of officers.

Army Promotion Ceilings

Army commanders have been informed that time in grade or time in service provisions of Paragraph 89, Circular 202—the Career Guidance Plan basic document—are not applicable to non-career fields first three grade promotions unless the command desires to impose these or other promotion criteria.

Army officials said that the total enlisted grade authorization for commands now will be computed by adding both the bulk grade spread authorized and the sum of enlisted grades provided in the T/O and E units authorized by the command's troop basis.

They said that non-career field enlisted promotion ceilings for the first three grades will consist of total enlisted grade authorization less the total grade authorization covering each of the MOS's included in any introduced career field.

At the same time, commanders were told that ceilings cited above may be exceeded for the following reasons:

1. Automatic promotions prescribed in Circular 202 up to and including grade four.

2. Enlistments and reenlistments as authorized in Circular 86 and War Department Pamphlet 12, 16 June 1946.

3. Promotions of former prisoners of war, combat wounded personnel, holders of Medal of Honor, promotion after 29 years service and other similar categories.

With regard to promotions in non-career field areas in the first three grades, the Army said that where circumstances make it appropriate commanders have been encouraged to pool first three grade non-career field promotions under their command ceiling.

Oahu Sector Commands

Headquarters, U. S. Army, Pacific has established definite boundaries for North and South Sector Commands, dividing the Island of Oahu into two major military areas, both under USARPAC. The dividing line runs roughly from Kahe Point on the west coast, through the Ewa junction, to Waikane on the east coast.

The Commanding General of Schofield Barracks, Brig. Gen. Claude B. Ferenbaugh, is also Commanding General of the North Sector Command. The South Sector Command, previously established, is commanded by Brig. Gen. Albert Piereson.

Sec. Forrestal's Recommendations

and is expected to return from time to time to confer with the Secretary of Defense.

In his report to the President, Mr. Forrestal, in addition to recommending merger of the Air National Guard, authorized a total of 12 wings, with the Air Force Reserve, revealed that approximately 20 other proposals of the Gray Board are being incorporated into the legislative program of the Military Establishment.

He said also that the report suggested "a closer relationship in certain areas between the Army and the National Guard."

Consolidation of sea transport services under the Navy ultimately will mean the end of the Army Transport Service, Mr. Forrestal reported. He said, however, the complex task of implementing the merger will require much time and study.

The Army Transport Service operates about 280 ships, Mr. Forrestal reported. These are manned by civilian crews.

Destined for an important role in the formulation of future military developments, the Weapons Systems Evaluation Group will make "comprehensive analyses and evaluations of weapons and weapons systems under projected conditions of war at the request of the Secretary of Defense, the Joint Chiefs of Staff or the Research and Development Board." Mr. Forrestal said.

He termed its organization "a marriage" between the professional capacities and abilities of scientists and military experts.

The WSEG will study such problems as the weapons system associated with air defense, the utilization of atomic power and eventually of such issues as the relative value of carriers and bombers.

No director for the WSEG has been named as yet, but it was reported that a high-ranking military officer will probably be given the post as the last assignment of his military career.

Naval War College

The second constant, the geography of the Globe, is also most important. Land is still the habitat of Man, and so long as it remains so, the final objectives of war will be land objectives. Nor have the seas that cover three-fourths of the surface of the Earth ceased to be an important factor in modern civilization. Sea power is the instrument with which Man has been able to adapt the broad sea expanses of the Globe to his own uses. Sea power means ships—ships that carry airplanes, ships that carry projectiles (and, in the foreseeable future, guided missiles), ships that carry armies and the logistics necessary to support war; and above all, ships that carry the great bulk of world trade, the backbone of modern civilization in peace and in war.

The decisive weapon of modern sea power is air power. That decisive combination known as sea-air power is a weapon whose potentialities have only begun to become apparent. Today no section of the Globe, however remote, can be considered insulated from the influence of this sea-air weapon. As our technological know-how continues to expand, the ways in which the broad sea areas of the Globe can be used in peace and in war will inevitably multiply.

Thus in an age when our attention is centered on spectacular scientific advances there is greater need than ever to clarify our thinking on the fundamentals of war and the problems of command. The quality of the commander is a decisive factor in the conduct of war. It is still he, the commander, who must do the planning for war. It is still he who must direct and coordinate the weapons of war. It is still he upon whose ability will hinge victory or defeat. The Naval War College has long been dedicated to the task of insuring that qualified officers of all services who attend its courses are given the opportunity to attain the breadth of understanding and vision so essential to victory in war. While there, our future commanders are able to study the strategy, tactics and logistics of sea power and to relate the role of sea power to the broader field of global warfare.

The Naval War College conducts three courses, the Senior and Junior courses in Strategy and Tactics and, of equal importance, the Logistics course. All courses are closely integrated with one another. The curriculum includes a study of weapons, geography, international relations, intelligence, communications, all phases of logistics, and atomic energy. The strategic problems are joint problems, involving not only all branches of the armed services but also various other agencies of government.

New developments and new ideas are weighed and discussed in an atmosphere of complete freedom of thought and speech. No dogma, doctrine or preconceived formulae with which to achieve victory are taught. Officers of all services are encouraged to express themselves freely in the numerous critiques and discussion periods scheduled throughout the course. Differences of opinion and divided conclusions are encouraged rather than discouraged. They are considered stimulating and helpful in our search for solutions to the pressing and puzzling problems we face today. Without these honest differences, freely expressed, there would exist a fatal weakness within our entire military establishment. No individual or group of individuals is expected to go along with the popular current of opinion. Each is free to reach his own conclusion based on his own logic and the facts as he has been able to determine them. Each is required to think for himself and to apply his own reasoning power to the solution of military problems.

The philosophy of the Naval War College can be summed up in the simple statement that we must never permit our thinking to become static. There must be a constant boil and ferment of new ideas. Old ideas and concepts must be subjected to the most careful scrutiny. Newer and better solutions to our problems must always be sought, and when they are found, there must still be the dissatisfaction of knowing there are better answers yet to be found.

The Naval War College is the catalytic agent through which officers, who possess the energy and the perspective, can achieve that mental stature so essential to the exercise of high command.

Reserve Activates 105 Units

The Department of the Army has announced that 105 units were activated in the Organized Reserve Corps during September and October. These activations, made initially in Class "C," raised the total number of activated Army Reserve units in various stages of organization and training to 10,022.

All units of the Organized Reserve are activated initially in Class "C." This indicates that a qualified commander has been selected and 60 per cent of the authorized officer strength is available to participate actively in the organization of the unit.

Upon activation in Class "C," many Army Reserve units are designated for ultimate expansion to Class "B" or Class "A," to be achieved as additional officer and enlisted personnel become available for assignment. In some cases, however, a unit receives an ultimate designation of Class "C" and further expansion is not authorized.

A Class "C" Reserve unit authorized for expansion may be officially recognized as Class "B" after the minimum of 80 per cent of commissioned officers and 80 per cent of the enlisted cadre have been assigned by competent orders. An ultimate Class "A" Reserve unit may be expanded from Class "B" to Class "A" when the minimum of 80 per cent of commissioned officers and 40 per cent of the total authorized enlisted strength have been officially assigned.

Deductions from W.O. Pay

The Army has announced that deductions for the maintenance of the United States Soldiers' Home will be made from the pay of all warrant officers of the Regular Army and Regular Air Force, including Women's Army Corps, Regular Army and the Women in the Regular Air Force.

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL has reported previously that the Army would deduct from the pay of WACs for the Soldiers' Home. Deductions will also be made from the pay of enlisted women of the Regular Air Force.

Free Tuition for Naval Personnel

Navy officers and enlisted men who are taking, or who wish to take, college courses during their off duty hours, can expect the Navy to help them with tuition expenses in the future.

A Navy Department announcement this week stated that the Navy will pay part of the tuition costs for students voluntarily enrolled in courses which will contribute to the improved performance of their duty or professional capabilities.

The new program will be instituted at the beginning of the next semester or quarter term, and Naval District Commandants have been authorized to expend special funds for payment of tuition for such courses. The maximum amount payable per semester or quarters is $25 per course, with two courses being allowed during a semester or quarter.

Both Regular Navy and Naval Reserve personnel under orders to active duty for a period of at least one year are eligible under the program. Enlisted personnel must have at least one year obligated service remaining upon enrollment.

Educational services officers or other educational counselors will advise applicants concerning courses suited to their needs, qualifications and educational programs.

Arrive At Pearl Harbor

The aircraft carrier USS Princeton, accompanied by the destroyers USS Benner and USS Fox, was scheduled to arrive in Pearl Harbor 17 Dec. Rear Adm. S. P. Ginder, USN, Commander Carrier Division TWO, and his staff are in the USS Princeton, which is commanded by Capt. M. E. Arnold, USN.

The three ships, recently on routine training exercises in the Western Pacific, are expected to depart Pearl Harbor for San Diego, 18 Dec.

The escort carrier USS Rendova, now at Guam, will conduct routine operations out of Guam, in the Western Pacific, under the operational control of the Commander, Naval Forces Western Pacific, Vice Adm. O. C. Badger, USN.

Navy Establishes New Schools

Four new training schools, two for personnel men and two for instructors, will be established by the Navy early next year. At the same time, two others will be disestablished.

The four new schools, all Class A institutions, will be set up in pairs; two at San Diego, Calif., and two at Norfolk, Va. The personnel men's schools will offer a 10-week course, with the first classes convening 3 Jan. 1949 and subsequent classes every two weeks thereafter. The instructors schools will train both officer and enlisted personnel.

The Gyro Compass School, at the Naval Shipyard in Brooklyn, N. Y., and the Teletype Operators School, Norfolk, will be disestablished early in 1949, and the functions of both schools will be transferred to other Navy training schools.

Navy Develops Jet Self-Starter

The first successful jet self-starter for jet and turboprop aircraft engines has been developed by the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics and the Air Research Manufacturing Company, Los Angeles.

The new self-starter system eliminates the use of cumbersome storage batteries or other heavy auxiliary power units outside the plane, and utilizes as its major component a newly developed small gas turbine weighing only 88 pounds. Highly compressed air is bled from this turbine to operate a high-speed air turbine starter unit, which is attached directly to the jet or turboprop engine.

Rear Adm. Theodore C. Lonnquest, Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics for Research and Development, said: "The development of this small, powerful turbine and the self-starter system for our jet engines is of the utmost importance. It will, of course, be a great saving in time, equipment, and manpower; and, further, will make our jet planes all the more versatile."

The new self-starting system also will allow jet or turboprop aircraft to use out-of-the-way bases which are not equipped to start their engines. It requires only a three-quarter horsepower motor and one storage battery for its own starting.

The turbine engine which powers the starter also can be utilized for cabin pressurization and air conditioning, for heating and deicing, and to operate other power consuming devices.

Second Uniform Allowance Illegal

The Comptroller General has issued blanket decision B-78670 in which he interprets section 302(f) of Public Law 381 of the 80th Congress as authorizing the payment of a uniform allowance only once to an enlisted man of the Marine Corps appointed as a temporary officer.

The official digest of the decision follows:

"Marine Corps enlisted personnel who received a $250 uniform allowance upon being initially appointed as temporary officers under the provisions of section 7(b) of the act of 24 July 1941, and who, subsequent to reversion to their permanent enlisted status, were given temporary appointments under the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 are not entitled to a second uniform gratuity under section 302(f) of the 1947 act, which authorizes payment of a uniform gratuity only to enlisted men who previously have not received such a gratuity under the provisions of the 1941 act."

When you move, notify the Army and Navy Journal of your change of address so you will not miss any issues.

Dates Set for Marine Boards

Marine Corps selection boards, scheduled to convene during 1949 to recommend officers on active duty with the regular establishment for initial appointment for limited duty status and for all promotions, will meet on the following dates:

Major Generals—5 Jan.
Brig. Generals—26 Jan.
Col. and Lt. Col. (Male)—9 Feb.
Maj. and Capt. (Male)—23 Feb.
Limited Duty—14 Mar.
Lt. Col., Maj. and Capt. (Women)—4 April.

The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL previously carried the estimated promotion zones for male officers. These have not changed. By law, the exact extent of each promotion zone is established by the Secretary of the Navy on the date of convening of the appropriate board.

In addition to the officers named in each promotion zone, those who have previously failed of selection and those below the promotion zone who have the required service in grade are also eligible for consideration, according to Marine Corps Bulletin Number 5-48, and their names and records will be presented to the appropriate selection board.

There is no promotion zone for regular commissioned women officers. Majors and captains, who by 30 June 1949 will have completed four years' service in grade from the dates of rank stated in their commissions, and 1st Lts. with three years' service in grade, similarly computed, will be eligible for consideration by the selection board for promotion. They will remain so eligible until they are either selected for promotion or separated from the active list. The number selected by the boards, will be determined on the convening date by the Secretary of the Navy. All first lieutenants who are eligible may be recommended for promotion by the board.

In addition to recommending officers for promotion, selection boards, shall also report the names of any eligible officers with less than twenty years' service whose reports and records indicate their unsatisfactory performance of duty in present grades and which indicate that they would not satisfactorily perform the duties of a higher grade.

MCROA to Meet in Chicago

The 1949 conference of the Marine Corps Reserve Officer Association will open next month in Chicago, with Lt. James Butterworth, President of the Chicago Chapter, as General Chairman.

Speakers tentatively scheduled to appear at the meeting are Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan, and the Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Clifton B. Cates. Other ranking officers of the Navy and Marine Corps will attend the luncheon and banquet sessions of the one-day conference, 29 Jan., on matters of interest to the Marine Corps Reserve.

The Association with 35 chapters here and abroad (Shanghai, China), since 1926 has represented Marine Reserve Officers before the Navy, the Congress and the Corps on matters of mutual interest.

No Nicknames for Women Marines

The official designation of women entering the Regular Marine Corps shall be "Women Marines," according to a Marine Corps announcement this week. However, the designation "U. S. Marine Corps" will apply to women as well as to men in the Marine Corps when used after a name. The letters "USMC-W" will be used in official reporting forms, and in the cases of Women Reservists the letters "USMCR-W" will be used.

Navy Selection Reports

(62½ per cent) from below the promotion zone.

No official explanation has come from the Navy, but unofficially it has been pointed out that all 24 could legally have been selected from below the zone if the Navy had so desired.

Of the total of 306 officers selected to be permanent captains, all but 18 were in the promotion zone. Although 18 exceeds the five per cent of the total, the Navy holds that this is permissible because some of them are Reserves to whom they say the law does not apply.

Three hundred and six Naval officers were elevated to the rank of Captain late last week when President Truman approved the report of a Navy Selection Board.

All of the appointments are to temporary grade but the new Captains will attain permanent rank in lineal order as vacancies occur in the permanent rank structure.

More than two-thirds, 269, of the 306 selected, were unrestricted line officers, 22 were designated for engineering duty only, eight for aeronautical engineering duty only, and seven for special duty only.

All but 14 of the 306 selected to Captain have served in that rank before. Of the total number listed within the promotion zone, only twelve were passed over, and these 12 have failed of selection only once. There are no commanders on duty who have failed of selection twice, inasmuch as there was no selection board for captains last year.

Three hundred and four officers were in the promotion zone, 288 were selected from the zone, and 18 were selected from below the zone. The 14 officers who have not previously served in the grade of Captain are all from below the promotion zone.

Study Air NG-Res. Merger

Existence of a "secret" Air Force committee to consider methods for implementing the proposed merger of the Air National Guard and the Air Force Reserve was revealed late this week.

The group, under chairmanship of Brig. Gen. R. K. Copsey, Air Reservist of New Jersey, reportedly was summoned to Washington by Assistant Secretary of the Air Force Cornelius V. Whitney. The group is utilizing space in his office.

The committee is composed of three Reserve officers and one Air National Guard officer. In addition to General Copsey, the Reserve members are 1st Lt. Robert Hahn and 1st Lt. Thomas Collins. The Air National Guard member is Col. Clarence Shoop, who commands a fighter group in Calif.

Air Force sources reveal that the committee was originally asked to serve for one month, but was not able to complete its study and to agree on a report in that time. Therefore, Assistant Secretary Whitney urged the group to continue session an additional two weeks.

However, it is reported that Colonel Shoop was forced to leave for his home in California late this week, thus leaving the group without National Guard representation.

Creation of the committee gained added importance this week as Secretary Forrestal revealed his recommendation to the President that the Air National Guard and the Air Force Reserve be consolidated. Because the committee was still involved in its study as the merger recommendation was made, members were said to have been taken by surprise by Mr. Forrestal's disclosure.

It is said also that the committee had not decided as yet that there should be complete integration of the Air National Guard into the Air Force Reserve. Apparently, a more "middle of the road" proposal was under active consideration as the Secretary of Defense released his recommendation to the President.

New Guard Fighter Wing

Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Cramer, Chief, National Guard Bureau, has announced that the 62d Fighter Wing, under command of Brig. Gen. Leonard Thomas and headquartered in Burbank, Calif., has completed its organization — the sixth wing of the Air National Guard to achieve this status. The 62d Wing consists of a fighter group of three squadrons, one light bomber squadron and supporting units, with a strength of about 2300 officers and men.

Regular WAF Appointments

The list of Women in the Air Force (WAF) candidates selected for commissions in the Regular Air Force reportedly was to be sent to the White House late this week for approval.

This means that the list probably will be ready for release in next week's issue of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL. It is understood that the list comprises approximately 120 names.

Aid Air Force Dependents

Concerned about the welfare of dependents of airmen unexpectedly transferred to the Berlin airlift, General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, has ordered commanders to make certain that "extraordinary assistance" is provided these families.

General Vandenberg said commanders should offer the assistance which normally would be the concern of the family heads. The Chief of Staff insisted that commanders "improvise where necessary" to insure adequate measures for the care and comfort of dependents left behind. If necessary, such action should circumvent routine official channels.

The text of General Vandenberg's message follows:

"I am deeply concerned about the welfare of dependents left behind in your command by Vittles personnel. The free world today owes a great deal to these people whose homes have been torn apart and certainly the least you and I can do is to help them carry their burden. We cannot sit back and expect the solutions to their many problems and difficulties to come about through routine official methods."

"I feel sure that you will agree that locally every possible action must be taken to ease their situation. To this end you and I must do everything in our power to see them through. We must do our utmost to provide the assistance which normally would be the concern of the family heads who were moved so suddenly."

"I am depending on you to improvise where necessary to insure that adequate measures are taken for their care and comfort by personal visits, by action of women's clubs, ARO, or Air Force Aid Society to assure that the Air Force will have no regrets. Sole dependence on these agencies, however, will not meet our requirement. Personal and immediate attention must be maintained in each area. I feel that there are many ways that this headquarters may be able to help. I expect to hear from you without delay if your own facilities are inadequate. In any event, I desire a report each month on action taken and results obtained."

School of Aviation Medicine

This week the USAF School of Aviation Medicine started a special course for men of the medical department to meet an urgent requirement in the Air Forces for medical personnel trained as Aeromedical Technicians.

The training will be for nine months, five at the school and four devoted to preceptorship training in the clinics and laboratories of large military hospitals. Students will graduate in four combined specialties: Altitude Chamber Operators, Air Evacuation Technicians, Flight Surgeon's Assistants and Medical Technicians.

Transfer Signal Activities

Secretary of Defense James Forrestal has ordered that all functions, powers and duties relating to military signalling pertaining to the Air Force shall be transferred from the Army to the Air Force.

The action was reported in Joint Army and Air Force Bulletin No. 46, 6 Dec.

Airmen Retirement Data

During November, 61 enlisted men retired. Of this total, 12 were retired for over 30 years' service; 31 were retired for more than 20 years' service, and eight were retired for physical disability.

Air Force Warrant Officers

The Air Force has announced procedures to be used in the assignment of individuals recently appointed or selected as Regular warrant officers.

Those appointed from enlisted status will be reassigned duties consistent with their career warrants and in vacancies authorizing a warrant officer or junior officer. Appointees will remain assigned to the station at which assigned when appointment was received if proper vacancies exist there. Except for reassignment to overseas service, a period of 18 months will normally be served at his original station before a warrant officer is eligible for reassignment.

Reserve officers on active duty who receive Regular warrant officer appointments may remain on duty as officers in the assignments being performed, but assignments within the fields of their career warrants are encouraged. When officers revert to their permanent warrants, assignment to career fields is mandatory.

When vacancies do not exist for assignment at the warrant officer's present station, the major air command will reassign the individual within the command, or, in case of no command vacancies, will report the fact to Headquarters, USAF, so that transfer can be made to position vacancies in other commands.

More than 2,000 Regular warrant officers have been integrated into the Air Force within the last month.

New Douglas Air Trainer

A new USAF trainer, the XT-30, has been completed in the mockup stage by the Douglas Aircraft Company at Santa Monica, Calif.

The experimental XT-30 was built under an Air Force development contract, which provides for the engineering and mockup of the trainer.

The single engine trainer is a conventional, low-wing monoplane. It is powered by a Wright R-1300 engine rated at 800 horsepower on takeoff. The engine, immediately aft of the cockpit, drives the propeller by a shaft which is under the cockpit floor.

Based on the contractor's guarantee, the XT-30 will have a top speed of 286 miles an hour at 10,000 feet, an endurance of 6½ hours at 190 miles an hour, and a service ceiling of 29,600 feet. It has a design gross weight of 5,999 pounds.

The trainer's wing span is 36 feet, 4 inches; length is 36 feet, 9½ inches, and it is 13 feet, ½ inches high. The XT-30 has a tricycle landing gear and is equipped with tandem seats.

Best Safety Record Trophy

The Daedalian Trophy, given annually to the Air Force command with the best flying safety record, was awarded to Headquarters Command in a formal retreat ceremony at Bolling AFB 14 Dec.

Headquarters Command, which includes all personnel at Air Force headquarters and at Bolling AFB, had the best safety record for the 1948 fiscal year. Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Knerr, Inspector General of the Air Force, made the presentation, and Brig. Gen. Burton M. Hovey, Jr., commanding general of Headquarters Command, accepted the Trophy. During the ceremony, General Hovey, who left this week to become Air Attaché to Argentina, will relinquish his command to Col. Sidney D. Grubbs, and troops of the base passed in review before their old and new commanders.

PRELUDE TO SURVIVAL

Forty-five years ago at Kitty Hawk . . . Orville Wright soared aloft . . . to make mankind's oldest dream of heavier-than-air flight . . . an accomplished fact. ¶ Despite a complacent belief that this scientific achievement heralded an era of expanding friendship among the peoples of the earth . . . time has shown that in ruthless hands the airplane can be a frightful instrument of aggression. ¶ Only three years after World War II . . . and just a year after the Air Force has commemorated its first anniversary of autonomous operation . . . there is abundant evidence that maintenance of a dominant American air power is a vital factor in discouraging aggressor nations. Republic joins with the USAF in committing our entire resources to this end.

Republic built the P-47 Thunderbolt, used on all fronts by the air forces of the Allied Nations in World War II . . . It is still flown by our Air Force and our National Guard . . . and we are now concentrating full production on the 600 MPH F-84 Thunderjet.

¶ Several hundred of these are in daily service with USAF groups throughout the country, meanwhile, development continues on faster, longer-range aircraft destined to probe new areas of performance. . . Republic Aviation Corp., Farmingdale, L.I., N.Y.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

THE indictment by a Federal grand jury of Alger Hiss, president of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, formerly a high official of the State Department, on two charges of perjury is a shocking development in the bizarre spy investigation conducted simultaneously by the Department of Justice and the House Committee on Un-American Activities. Hiss is charged with having lied under oath when he denied that he gave confidential State Department documents to Whittaker Chambers, a former Communist agent. Apparently prosecution of Hiss for alleged theft of the papers is barred by the statute of limitations. The grand jury, however, expressed its belief that the accused, while a trusted officer of our Government, actually made some of our confidential files available for transmission to a foreign government—in this case Russia.

It had been expected that the grand jury would also indict Whittaker Chambers, on whose testimony Hiss was charged with perjury. Chambers is a self-confessed Communist spy, and by his own admission was the receiver of stolen documents. Despite the advantage of his evidence in prosecuting other offenders some way should be found to punish the treasonable disloyalty of this individual.

The disclosures of the Un-American Activities Committee indicate that various officials and employees of our Government were involved in a Red network of Soviet spies. Representatives of the committee expressed the belief that details of the formerly super-secret Norden bombsight were given to Russian agents by a civilian employee of the Army, who may still be in the Government service. Many of the most flagrant acts of disloyalty apparently took place nine or ten years ago. This lapse of time probably blocks successful prosecution of the offenders. However, as the committee points out, if Russia went to so much trouble in 1938 to learn our military and diplomatic secrets, there is every reason to believe that under present conditions Red efforts in this direction have been redoubled. The public has ample cause to be alarmed lest gullible Communist sympathizers at this moment may be rifling our confidential files and supplying the Soviet Union with military secrets vital to our security. Every counterintelligence agency of our National Military Establishment should be cooperating with the Federal Bureau of Investigation to provide a leak-proof security system throughout the Government. Exhaustive loyalty checks should be made of every individual having access to secret documents. This should be done in spite of malicious or misguided agitation of self-constituted groups who go to absurd lengths to protect what they regard as the civil rights of Government employees. Security is of paramount importance. The safety of the Nation and the American way of life were treacherously threatened.

FORMER President Herbert Hoover this week headed an impressive array of witnesses appearing before the Senate Civil Service Committee to urge substantial salary increases for civilian officials of the Government. The unanimity of the witnesses in favor of higher pay augurs well not only for civilian pay increases, but also for higher compensation for officers of the Armed Services, proposals for which will soon be presented to Congress. Among those in addition to Mr. Hoover who advocated civilian pay increases were Budget Director James E. Webb, Comptroller General Lindsey Warren, and several leaders of unions of Government employees. Mr. Hoover urged increases in salaries and expense accounts for the President and the Vice President and pay advances for Government administrators all down the line. Mr. Webb presented the views of President Truman favoring specific salary raises for members of the Cabinet, heads of Government agencies, members of boards and commissions and other key officials. The President recommended that the pay of Cabinet officers be raised from $15,000 to $25,000 per year, and principal departmental assistants to $22,500, with other designated key officials to be paid from $17,500 to $20,000. Mr. Webb informed the committee that increases in military compensation and general advances in the pay scale of civilian employees were under study. It should be noted that the Army Chief of Staff, the Chief of Naval Operations and the Air Force Chief of Staff, the three ranking officers of the Armed Forces, receive substantially less than the amount recommended for civilian officials with far less responsibilities. Presumably the forthcoming report of the Commission on Pay Revision for the Armed Forces will recommend that the pay of top military officers conform more nearly to that sought by the President for civilian officials. Pay of officers of the Armed Forces in all ranks has lagged far behind civilians of comparable qualifications in and out of the government service and an upward salary revision should be authorized promptly by the new Congress.

THE recent selection of 24 Navy captains for promotion to rear admiral necessitated the forced retirement of 102 captains on or before 30 June, 1949. Under the law these officers with more than 30 years' service, having been passed over twice by selection boards, must be relieved from active duty during the first half of next year. Most of these officers have excellent combat records and are of great value to the Navy. Nevertheless, because they were not among those chosen to fill relatively few vacancies in flag rank they have no alternative but to retire. Nearly all of them are comparatively young, the median age being 51. The loss to the Navy of these splendid officers of long experience will be severe. No civilian industrial enterprise could afford such a turnover of qualified key personnel. It is pertinent to question the advantage of a law that compels the Government to lose such a large number of highly-trained specialists at a time when their services are urgently needed for National Security. The purpose of the statute is to stimulate the flow of promotion in order that officers may be considered for flag rank at an age when they are at the peak of their capabilities. It is contended that without forced attrition those in the rank of captain would block the advancement of those in lower grades and the promotion list would become stagnant. However, the interests of the country are paramount to those of any individual and no highly qualified officer of suitable age should be eliminated for the sole purpose of advancing a younger colleague. True, opportunities for promotion are essential to efficiency and morale. However, if they cannot be attained through normal attrition, they should be sought through provision for temporary advancement, or for additional numbers in grade.

In The Journal

One Year Ago

At a ceremony in the office of the Secretary of the Navy on 15 Dec., Admiral Louis E. Denfeld was sworn in as Chief of Naval Operations, succeeding Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz.

10 Years Ago

Important to carrying out even the program contemplated before the new defense policy was defined, and even more so now, is an increase in grades and ratings to attract the required type of enlisted men for the service and to give prospect for advancement to those now in the service, and a general pay increase in commissioned and enlisted ranks to place them more on par with comparable responsibilities in civil life.

25 Years Ago

That only offense can bring defense has not even begun to sink into the consciousness of our people. That being prepared to follow such a policy in case of aggression directed against this country is not an aggressive act on our part towards others is also generally misunderstood.

50 Years Ago

It is to be hoped that Congress will give prompt attention to the recommendation of the Secretary of the Navy that the transport service of the United States be placed under the supervision of his Department. This accords with the practice of foreign governments and we can see no possible objection to adopting it except such as is due to unreasoning prejudice against innovation.

80 Years Ago

The original 13 States seem never to have been able to divest themselves of the recollection and consciousness that they were once the 13 colonies. If they have preserved their colonial ties of affection, so have they their colonial differences, prejudices, peculiarities and exclusiveness. Rare are the cases, from Maine to Georgia, where the pride of being an American towers supreme above local influence and early education.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—Conversations are being carried on in the State Department in Washington relative to the participation of the United States and Canada with five western European nations in a North Atlantic Security Treaty. This pact in effect would be a long-term defensive alliance of the participating powers, carrying mutual guarantees against aggression. The participants in the current discussions are Under Secretary Robert A. Lovett for the United States, and the Ambassadors of Canada, Great Britain, France, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

When the conferences were begun the State Department made a brief announcement, merely indicating that these discussions which were started last summer and suspended several months ago are now being resumed. It was stated that there would be no further announcement until final decisions had been reached. The discussions are expected to continue for several weeks, during which a tentative draft of a treaty will probably be prepared.

The details of the proposal for the convention have not been made public, but it is believed to encompass a long-term agreement whereby the United States and Canada would join the five European powers in plans for common action in the event that the independence of these countries should be threatened. The five European countries are united by the Brussels agreement for mutual protection. They have made plans for merging their military strength in a common defense force under a planning staff headed by Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery of England.

As a logical extension of this union the European nations are now seeking the active assistance of the United States and Canada and have met with considerable encouragement in both countries. Participation in the proposed treaty would be a radical departure from the traditional policy of the United States of avoiding permanent military alliances. However, the administration is apparently sympathetic to the project and a treaty will probably be evolved and submitted to the Senate. It will receive the support of most Democratic members and probably considerable Republican backing, including that of Senator Arthur Vandenberg, ranking minority member of the Foreign Relations Committee. Strong opposition may be expected from those who fear that a long-range commitment of this character might lead to war. Whether this group could muster the necessary votes to prevent ratification by a two-thirds majority is conjectural.

In order to come within our Constitutional structure any such treaty would have to leave Congress free to act in any future situation. We cannot be automatically committed to war. However, the existence of a treaty of this character would probably be regarded as a moral, if not a legal commitment to send military assistance to any signatory state involved in war with an outside power.

The cause of the North Atlantic Security Treaty was not helped this week by the announcement that firms in England, Holland and Belgium had used Marshall Plan funds to turn a neat profit at the expense of Americans. The United States advanced funds to these countries for the purchase of scarce non-ferrous metals, principally aluminum, in Canada. After the purchases were made substantial amounts were resold to American business men at substantial price increases. These transactions were immediately denounced by our Government and steps will be taken to impose safeguards against repetitions.

Gains by the Communist armies, both in the Nanking area, and farther north in the Peiping sector, make it unlikely that American aid to the tottering Chinese government would be effective in checking the Red advance. So serious has the situation become that an early peace with the successful Communists is freely predicted. This might lead to a coalition government of Liberals and Communists, with President Chiang Kai-shek definitely out. Seven hundred United States Marines have been sent to Shanghai from Tsingtao for the protection of American port facilities and to expedite the evacuation of American civilians.

Paul Hoffman, head of the Economic Cooperation Administration was in China during the week and conferred with Chiang Kai-shek at Nanking. His report to the President on the current military and political situation will assist the administration in determining the extent to which we are willing to go in providing additional assistance to China. After leaving China, Mr. Hoffman went to Korea and then to Japan where he will confer with General Douglas MacArthur. In a detailed cable to Washington, General MacArthur is reported to have expressed great concern over the sweeping Communist victories in China, which he feels have weakened our position in Japan. It is reported that General MacArthur has requested reinforcements for his occupation troops.

American officials are greatly encouraged in their hopes for peace in Palestine by developments of the past week. The United Nations has designated a Conciliation Commission, composed of representatives of the United States, France and Turkey, to attempt to end hostilities in the Holy Land. At the same time informal negotiations are reported in progress between representatives of Israel and King Abdullah of Transjordan. The latter has indicated that he will extend his rule to those sections of Palestine assigned to the Arabs under the partition plan of the United Nations. This move of Abdullah is strongly opposed by Egypt and other members of the Arab League. However, any agreement reached by the Jews and Abdullah is likely to have the blessing of the Conciliation Commission.

The Communist government of Rumania has requested the withdrawal of Col. John R. Lovell, military attaché, and Henry P. Leverich, counselor of the United States Legation at Bucharest. The charges against these officers are vague, but apparently relate to recent accusations of espionage made against Rumanians, who are said to have given military information to Americans and British. The State Department acquiesced in the request for withdrawal of the American officers, and in turn asked that two officials of the Rumanian Legation in Washington be sent home.

In our own hemisphere uprisings in two small Central American countries have occasioned some concern in our State Department. Soon after Costa Rica had disbanded her army and placed her reliance in the new Pan-American Security Treaty a revolt broke out. A few hundred insurgents under former President Calderon are reported to have invaded Costa Rica from Nicaragua. Immediately Costa Rica invoked the new treaty guaranteeing her against invasion. Prompt action was taken in the appointment of an investigating commission by the parties to the treaty and a meeting of foreign ministers will be held soon to determine the merits of Costa Rica's complaint.

In El Salvador a military junta has deposed the president and seized the government. This follows the pattern of recent similar revolts in Peru and Venezuela. Our officials are seeking to learn whether these uprisings are coincidental or whether they are being prompted by outside influences.

Tension in the Berlin dispute between Russia and the western powers was increased on Thursday when the French blew up the high towers of the Soviet radio station. These towers were located near the new Tegel airfield and constituted a menace to the landing of airlift planes. Because of the ground haze prevalent at this season many cargo planes have to be landed by radar and the towers were a definite hazard. The French notified the radio station several weeks ago that these obstructions would be demolished. The Soviet station is located in the British sector and the towers in the French zone. Soviet authorities continued to operate this station under an arrangement with the British made early in the occupation period three years ago.

Steelman Heads Resources Board—The President has designated Dr. John R. Steelman, assistant to the President, as acting chairman of the National Resources Planning Board, to succeed Arthur M. Hill, whose resignation became effective this week. Dr. Steelman will serve in this capacity only until a permanent chairman is designated sometime in the near future.

Sustained Flight with Pilotless Ram Jets—In connection with the Navy's recent announcement concerning the longest sustained flights ever made by pilotless aircraft powered by ram-jets (reported on page 406, ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL, 4 Dec.) there is considerable interest in the missile itself. This missile is officially designated as the PTV-N-2a (Gorgon IV). The initials stand for "Propulsion Test Vehicle." It was designed, developed and built, except for the engine, by the Glenn L. Martin Company. The ram-jet Gorgon IV engine, sometimes called the "stovepipe," was developed at the University of Southern California, and the engines used in the Navy-Martin tests were manufactured by the Marquardt Aircraft Company. Except for a fuel pump, the ram-jet has no moving parts and depends for its thrust on a difference in momentum between the entering air and the exhaust gases.

The Gorgon IV is an all-metal, high-winged monoplane, 22 feet long, with a wing span of 10 feet. Gross weight is 1,600 pounds, 700 pounds of which is ordinary 80-octane gasoline (116 gallons), the ram-jet fuel. After the initial ignition of this fuel by the spark plug, the burning and thrust are continuous until the fuel is exhausted.

The circular ram-jet on the Gorgon IV is suspended below the fuselage. It is seven feet long and 20 inches in diameter at the widest point.

The Gorgon IV is completely instrumented to telemeter to a ground receiving station such data as speed, altitude, brake drag, controllability, engine operation and other vital information. The telemetering system proved to be extremely reliable, and much data for further evaluation of the ram-jet were recorded during the flights.

The Gorgons are equipped with a parachute recovery system which operates automatically upon cessation of powered flight. Several were recovered with so little damage that only a minimum of work would be required to prepare them for further flight.

It was pointed out by both the Navy and the Martin Company that the Gorgon IV is not designed or intended to fly at speeds appreciably greater than those reached during the test flights. When high subsonic speed was reached, drag brakes were applied to maintain the desired speed.

Air Force Uniforms—Budgetary cutbacks necessitated by the President's $15,000,000,000 for the National Defense Establishment probably will mean that the Air Force will delay plans for adoption of new uniforms. It is understood that Air Force clothing experts have made tentative designs for new uniforms, both for male and female personnel. However, with the necessity to retrench from previous budget estimates exceeding the overall limitation of $15,000,000,000, it now appears that new uniforms for the Air Force are unlikely next year.

Meantime, WAF officials report that—at least for the present—a uniform for formal evening wear will not be authorized. They say that for such occasions WAFS will either wear civilian evening gowns or their regular uniforms.

Guidebook for Navy Speechmakers—A noted newspaper columnist this week drew attention to a Navy publication described as "a confidential handbook to guide Navy officers in making public speeches and . . . poking gibes at the Air Force." Investigation has disclosed that the booklet referred to was prepared by the Navy Department's Office of Public Relations for use of officers appearing as speakers throughout the country on Navy Day, last October. In an introduction to the book, Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, Chief of Naval Operations, points out that "Once again Navy Day offers members of the Naval Service an exceptional opportunity to impress upon the public the continuing importance of seapower to the national security." The book contains excerpts from numerous speeches made by Navy officers and officials during 1948, chosen because they cover subjects which "the Department believes require special emphasis from the viewpoint of national preparedness."

Airways and Air Communications Service—Four American units—Wiesbaden, Rhein/Main, Tempelhof at Berlin, and Fassberg—reported 5,750 GCA landings for the month as compared to 7,539 for the entire Vittles operation up to November. These figures do not include the GCA landings made by British installations at Wunstorf and Gatow in Berlin. These units are British operated.

The five control towers—Wiesbaden, Rhein/Main, Tempelhof, Fassberg, and Tegel—made 68,953 contacts during November, bringing their total through Vittles to 481,620. During the five-month period these towers have handled 181,576 landings and takeoffs. The Ground-to-air contacts at Berlin and Frankfurt totalled 30,454 for November, bringing the totals for Vittles to 204,118.

Navy Transport Seaplanes—The veteran PBVs of Air Transport Squadron 23 are the feeder lines of MATS, servicing areas of the Trust Territory not normally reached by surface transportation. Commanded by Comdr. George F. Rice, USN, VR-23 has been dubbed "Tramp Steamers of the Airways" due to the widely varied cargo it flies to the tiny islands and atolls of the Trust Territory.

They have flown species of Scorias (large black wasps) from Singapore to combat the coconut beetles in the Palau Islands of the Western Carolines. From Palau they flew snakes to a MATS terminal for further transportation to the zoo at San Diego. Once this squadron flew 270 white rats to Ponape Island in the Eastern Carolines for experimental purposes in the fight against encyphillitis. As one VR-23 officer recently said: "We have hauled an endless variety of unusual cargo. This has included boots, bags, bugs, babies, buggies, bottles and boatswains."

Organized Reserve Corps—Commanding officers for three Organized Reserve Corps units in Wilmington, Del. and one in East Orange, N. J. have been announced by Maj. Gen. Lawrence C. Jaynes, Commanding General, New York-New Jersey-Delaware Military District of First Army. Lt. Col. Charles T. Bauer, Assistant Supervisor, E. I. duPont de Nemours & Company, has been named commander of Head-

I. duPont de Nemours & Company, will command the 304th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Group; Col. Herman W. Cook of Middletown, Delaware, has been named commander of the 1331st Anti-Aircraft Artillery Training Brigade.

General Jaynes also announced that Col. Herbert V. Ryan, Manager of Claims Division, Prudential Insurance Company, Newark, will command Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 1330th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Training Brigade, East Orange, New Jersey.

Air Medical Service Officers—Taking cognizance of “the increasingly acute shortage of Medical Corps officers,” Air Force surgeons have been urged to utilize Medical Service Corps officers to the fullest extent possible. The Air Force has instructed that “Medical officers must be relieved of as many purely administrative duties as possible.”

Quartermaster Corps—Lt. Col. Arthur C. Bass will be assigned to the Staff and Faculty at the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va., upon completion of the present course effective 2 Feb. 1949.

Lt. Col. Harry G. Roller is assigned to US Army Group, American Mission for Aid to Greece, Athens, Greece, effective February 1949.

Lt. Col. Raymond R. Guehring will attend the Biochemistry course at the University of California, January 1949.

Medical Service Corps—The ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL was told this week that a bill to readjust the Medical Service Corps permanent promotion list has been included on the list of proposed Army legislation for the 81st Congress. Last week's issue explained the difficulty which has resulted from the fact that some officers with greater length of service are placed below junior officers in some ranks. This situation, it was said, is expected to result in a reduced number of Medical Service Corps officers receiving permanent promotions on 1 January 1949. What priority designation the MSC legislation will receive could not be ascertained.

Provost Marshal General—Maj. Gen. Edwin P. Parker, Jr., The Provost Marshal General, has become an “honorary citizen” of the State of Texas and also of the City of New Orleans, La., coincident to an inspection of Corps of Military Police, ROTC facilities and units at Loyola University, New Orleans, and at the University, of Texas, Austin. City officials presented the General with the “key” to the city during his visit to the southern seaport while, at a meeting with the Military Affairs Committee of the Austin Chamber of Commerce, he was presented with a certificate of Texas citizenship and with a “10-gallon Stetson.” A Virginian by birth, by action of Governor Jester in recognition of his law-enforcement activities, the Army's Provost Marshal General also became an honorary member of the famous Texas Rangers.

Army Judge Advocate General—No officers of the Judge Advocate Generals Department are to be included among the group of officers to receive temporary promotions shortly after the first of the year, the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL learned this week. Apparently, promotions of JAGD officers to higher temporary rank will be delayed until after 1 Feb. when the separate promotion list is adopted for the legal experts of the Army.

The officers of the JAGO were hosts at a stag smoker at the South Post Ft. Myer Officers' Club held on 9 Dec., from 1700 to 1900. Enlisting in the New York National Guard as a private in 1904, General Kincaid has served in nearly all grades, including active duty on the Mexican Border in 1916. During World War I he commanded the 2nd Battalion, 106th Infantry, 27th Division, in the Battle of the Hindenburg Line. He was appointed Adjutant General of the State by Governor Nathan E. Miller in 1921 and served for two years in that office. Returning to active Federal service in World War II, he was senior Civil Affairs Officer in Naples, Italy, in 1944 and later Allied Military Governor of Naples. In civilian life, General Kincaid is the President of the American Hotels Corporation, New York City.

A former war-time temporary camp-site at Schofield Barracks will be renovated at a cost of $130,000 to provide a summer encampment area for the Hawaii National Guard, it was announced this week by Headquarters, U. S. Army, Pacific. All work will be completed in time for the 1949 HNG summer encampment, USARPAC said. Work to be done includes repairing mess halls and rehabilitating plumbing, electrical and drainage facilities.

Preliminary arrangements for the 1949 summer encampment for more than 60,000 National Guardsmen in the First Army area were made at a one-day conference of high-ranking state and Army officials on Governors Island, N. Y., on 7 Dec. Representatives from each of the nine states convened with General Courtney H. Hodges, Commanding General of First Army. Conference included the State Adjutants General, Senior Army instructors, National Guard commanders of higher units, as well as the Commanding Generals of First Army, New York-New Jersey-Delaware Military District and the First Service Command.

"UNITED STATES AT WAR"

A limited number of copies of the Army and Navy Journal's historic volume "United States at War" is still available. This series, the first volume of which was published 7 December 1942 with succeeding volumes each year until the war's end, forms a complete history of World War II in authoritative articles written by military, naval and civilian leaders actually in charge of the operations in the active theater and at home. Profusely illustrated they merit a place in every well balanced library.

A small number of each of the volumes is ready for distribution at $3.00 per copy in paper binding and $5.00 in cloth binding. (Copies of Volume I are available only in paper binding.)

Terrance Quinn

Terrance Quinn, 15 year old son of Col. M. A. Quinn, Commanding Officer, Kansas City Quartermaster Activities, was buried with honors 6 Dec. at the Fort Leavenworth Post Cemetery.

One of seven children of Colonel and Mrs. Quinn, the boy was fatally injured 3 Dec. in Kansas City when he was run over by a truck as he was on the way with his brother, Jimmy, 14, from church to their classes at De La Salle Military Academy. Terrance is credited with saving his brother's life by pushing him out of the way of the oncoming truck.

At the time of the fatal accident Colonel Quinn was returning by plane to Kansas City from the Fort Worth Quartermaster Depot where he had delivered earlier in the day American Graves Registration Distribution Center records having to do with the transfer of some of the Center's activities to the Fort Worth Center. Word of the accident was imparted to Colonel Quinn by another son, Mike, upon arrival of the Colonel at the Kansas City airport.

Interment services at the Fort Leavenworth Post Cemetery followed a requiem high mass at the Visitation Catholic Church in Kansas City. Church dignitaries, including Bishop Marling of the Kansas City diocese, Monsignor Thomas B. McDonald, pastor of the church, and Monsignor (Col.-Ret.) L. Curtis Tierman, officiated at the mass. At the graveside services, which were attended by military headed by Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, Commanding General of Fort Leavenworth; Chaplain (Maj.) Maurice E. Powers assisted at the rites.

Col. R. C. Williams

Col. Robert C. Williams, CE, USA, former chief of operations and training in the Office of the Chief of Engineers, was buried 13 Dec. in Arlington National Cemetery.

Colonel Williams died 9 Dec. at his home in Asheville, N. C. His mother, Mrs. R. D. Williams, and brother, W. Raymond Williams, communications chief for the Atomic Energy Commission, live at 801 N. Harrison St., Arlington, Va.

A graduate of The Citadel, Charleston, S. C., Colonel Williams was commissioned in the infantry in 1912, served in World War I in the Thirty-sixth Infantry and in the Ninth Division's machine gun battalion. He was Army district engineer at Vicksburg, St. Paul and in Hawaii, and was engineer instructor with

FINANCEMERCHANT MARINE*Financial Digest

The Department of Commerce reports that the personal income of residents of the United States in October reached the record annual rate of $215.6 billions. This compares with the yearly rate of $214.9 for September and $200 billions for October 1947. The Department indicated that the trend appears to be toward a leveling off and that the steady increase characteristic of the first ten months of this year may not be expected to continue.

Employment for November was estimated at 59,393,000, an all-time high for that month, usually regarded as slack. This number was 1,298,000 greater than for November of last year. Thus far in December there has been a considerable number of lay-offs reported, partially offset by temporary holiday employment. The reduction of workers was partly seasonal and partly due to a decline in consumer demand for certain products.

Bituminous coal production has outstripped immediate requirements. This is due in part to moderate fall temperatures and partly to a decline in exports. While petroleum products are tighter than coal, indications are that the winter demand will be met without serious difficulty. Electric power capacity is barely sufficient for current requirements. Lack of generating equipment and other machinery has delayed an urgently needed expansion of facilities.

Christmas retail trade picked up materially during the past ten days, but the aggregate holiday business, while good, is expected to be below that of the record season of 1947. There is a sharp demand for low and moderate priced articles, but consumer resistance is felt in high-priced luxury lines.

the National Guard in North and South Carolina.

In World War II he was chief of engineer training at Fort Leonard Wood, Jefferson Barracks, Camp Swift and Camp Claiborne. He was a graduate of the Command and General Staff School at the Army War College.

Merchant Marine

The privately-owned American merchant fleet now stands at 1,212 ships totaling over 14,100,000 deadweight tons, National Federation of American Shipping has reported in its monthly summary of the status of the Merchant Marine. The Federation reported that four cargo vessels purchased from the U. S. Maritime Commission during November raised the total fleet on 1 Dec. to 716 dry cargo ships and combination cargo and passenger vessels of almost 7.2 million deadweight tons. In addition there are now 496 privately owned tankers of nearly 7 million deadweight tons.

All British shipping losses during the last war will have been replaced by the time present building or orders in British shipyards have been completed it is reported. Starting the war with 17,400,000 tons of shipping, Great Britain lost 11,333,000 tons through enemy action, but with the help of intensive replacement building emerged with 13,900,000 tons on the British Register at the end of the war. The most recent figures available show that for the third quarter of 1948, merchant shipping under construction in British yards was down by some 30,000 tons to a total of 2,208,999 tons gross compared with the previous three months.

The United States ranked third in the gross tonnage of ships on order or under construction in the private shipyards of the world for the first ten months of 1948 as a result of the oil tanker construction program, according to a report of the Shipbuilders Council of America.

Great Britain is building 46.8 per cent of the tonnage consisting of 532 vessels aggregating 8,838,572 gross tons. Sweden is second with 16.5 per cent or 198 vessels totaling 1,352,555 gross tons. The United States with 14.9 per cent is building 79 vessels of 1,221,054 gross tons.

Navy Buys AF Rescue Boats

The Bureau of Ships, U. S. Navy, has been given responsibility for the design, development, procurement, repair and maintenance of rescue boats for the Air Force. The two Services have entered a joint agreement calling for joint use of rescue craft.

Report to Hoover Unit

Under Secretary of Defense be authorized, this official to direct much of the routine business of the Department. It suggested that the Defense Secretary be empowered to appoint one of the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as chairman to direct studies and deliberations of that body. The committee proposed the appointment of a high-ranking officer as military adviser to the Secretary. This officer would be junior to the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He would not be authorized to take action on his own responsibility and would have no command authority and no military staff, though assistants could be provided.

While the committee agreed that the National Security Organization was basically sound it felt for a number of reasons that it was not working well. Among things that drew adverse criticism were continued interservice rivalry, inadequate functioning of some important security agencies, lack of liaison between foreign policy and national military power, disturbing inadequacies of our intelligence system, and inadequate authority centered in the office of the Secretary of Defense.

As evidence of the inadequacies of our intelligence system the committee pointed out that in the spring of this year a mistaken estimate of a departmental intelligence agency—reportedly that of the Air Force—stimulated recommendations which, if followed, might have had serious consequences. Fortunately the Central Intelligence Agency and other groups correctly evaluated available information. It is understood that the reference was to unfounded reports of imminent military action by Russia.

The committee insisted that the military budget needs a major overhaul. It failed to find in the Military Establishment a sense of cost consciousness or a general realization of the vital importance of conservation of our resources to National Security. It urged better fiscal policies and closer inventory control. In this connection the committee reported that the Army had lost track of some 9,000 tanks. At the end of the war statistics showed we had 25,000 but the Army could account for only 16,000.

The committee also found that the original budget estimates called for the modernization of 103 more tanks of a certain type than the Army possessed. In another item a misplaced figure added thirty million dollars to the estimates.

The task force was not satisfied with progress in scientific research and development. It was particularly concerned over the present status of plans for rapid mobilization of human material and spiritual resources in the event of sudden war. While noting progress in stockpiling strategic materials it indicated some worry over this feature of our defense program. It expressed dissatisfaction with our position relative to problems presented by new and unconventional methods of warfare, by the development of psychological warfare, and with regard to provision against mass destruction weapons of biological, chemical and radiological warfare.

However, despite these somewhat disturbing conclusions the committee found that National Security machinery, while not working smoothly, is steadily improving.

The recommendations of the committee cover six general areas:

- (1) Strengthening central authority in the Office of the Secretary of Defense.
- (2) Overhauling the military budget.
- (3) Improving teamwork.
- (4) Relating scientific research and development more closely to strategic planning.
- (5) Expediting plans for civilian mobilization.
- (6) Adequate provision for and against new and unconventional methods of warfare.

The general recommendations were expanded into detailed proposals in each of these fields. Among them were specific statutory amendments empowering the Secretary of Defense to exercise greatly increased authority over departments and agencies of the Military Establishment. He would control military budget estimates, supervise expenditures, and approve requests for Congressional authorization of funds.

The committee recommended repeal of the right of the Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force to appeal from the Secretary of Defense to the President or the Director of the Budget. It proposed the elimination of the Under Secretaries in each of the three defense departments, and would limit each department to a Secretary and two Assistant Secretaries. The creation of the office of Controller in the Office of the Secretary of Defense is advocated, this official to exercise authority over the military budget.

A moderate increase in the present limitation of 100 officers in the Joint Staff is proposed. The committee would retain responsibility for medical service in each department, but it suggested that consideration be given to merging most Army and Navy general hospitals with other Federal hospitals, presumably under the proposed new Department of Public Welfare. Retention of the Army and Navy Medical Centers at Walter Reed Hospital and at Bethesda, Md., by these Services, however, was contemplated by the committee.

Substantial reductions in expenditures for public relations were urged, with a view to eliminating special pleading, competitive lobbying and publicity designed to influence public opinion. The merging of all recruiting activities was proposed. Special studies of the military education system were suggested, and pending such studies it was proposed that the establishment of an Air Academy, comparable to the Military and Navy Academies, be deferred.

In his memorandum dissenting from the committee's report Judge Patterson made the following recommendations:

"(1) That the three branches of the Armed Forces be placed in a single executive department (to be called the Department of Defense). The branches themselves would not be merged, but would exist as the Army, the Navy and the Air Force. The abolition of the three executive departments would abolish also the posts of secretaries, under secretaries and assistant secretaries of those departments.

"(2) That the Secretary of Defense be the head of the Department, with broad power to manage and direct the activities of the Department, to the same extent that the Secretary of State directs the State Department or the Secretary of the Treasury directs the Treasury Department. There should be an Under Secretary and two Assistant Secretaries to assist the Secretary. Their duties should be department-wide, as the Secretary may direct, and they should not be tied to boosting the interest or pressing the advantage of a particular branch of the Armed Forces.

"(3) There should be a Chief of Staff, to be selected from one of the three services and to be responsible to the President and the Secretary of Defense. He should not command the military forces, but should serve as the agent, advisor and executive of the Secretary of Defense, subject at all times to the direction and control of the Secretary, and should preside over and cast the deciding vote in the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He should have the assistance of a General Staff, to be made up of officers drawn in equal numbers from the three services.

"(4) The post of Chief of Staff to the Commander in Chief, an historical accident, should be abolished."

The members of the Special Committee which conducted the survey of the Military Establishment are:

Report to Hoover Unit

Chester W. Nimitz, General Carl Spaatz, Lieutenant General Stanley Embick, Major General Frederick L. Anderson, Admiral R. S. Edwards, Admiral Ben Moreel, Admiral John H. Towers, Lieutenant General James H. Doolittle, Lieutenant General Ira C. Eaker, Major General Gilbert R. Cook, Major General Edward P. Curtis, Major General Robert W. Hasbrouck, Colonel Oveta Culp Hobby and Colonel Truman Smith.

The following official summary of the report of the Special Committee was made public by the Hoover Commission:

"The new National Security Organization, established under the National Security Act of 1947—to provide comprehensive programs and integrated policies on national security and combining the military services under the Secretary of Defense—is 'soundly constructed but is not yet working well,' the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government was told today.

"A 'task force' committee has proposed, in a report to the bi-partisan 12-man Commission, that: steps should be taken (1) to clarify and strengthen the authority of the Secretary of Defense over the military departments and their civilian Secretaries, (2) to overhaul military budget practices and procedures from top to bottom, (3) to improve 'teamwork' throughout the National Security Organization, (4) to relate scientific research and development closely to strategic planning, (5) to expedite plans for civilian and industrial mobilization in case of war, and (6) to make adequate provision—for and against—new and unconventional warfare. The report also emphasized that 'civilian control of the military establishment must be clearly established and firmly maintained.'

"The task force committee considered and recommended against (1) a single military Chief of Staff with a General Staff in command of all three military services; (2) merger of the three military departments into a single department; and (3) merger of the Naval Air Arm with the Air Force. Dissent was registered by two members, Chester L. Barnard and John J. McCloy from the decision against a single military Chief of Staff and General Staff. Another member, General Robert E. Wood, dissented from the decision against a merger of the Naval Air Arm and the Air Force. A fourth member, Judge Robert P. Patterson entered dissents on a number of points.

"Task force recommendations do not necessarily represent the views of the Commission and, in some cases, may be modified or altered in the Commission's report to Congress in order to present a completed pattern of organization.

"When the Commission has studied the task force report, it will report in turn to Congress by which it was created by unanimous vote in July 1947. National Security is one of 23 major problems of Government which Commission task forces have been studying for about a year in a search for opportunities to simplify and improve the governmental structure with resultant economies.

"The task force on the National Security Organization is headed by Ferdinand Eberstadt, former Chairman of the Army and Navy Munitions Board and Vice Chairman of the War Production Board. Among its 14 members are some of the country's foremost official and industrial figures in the recent war effort. Its 18 advisers and consultants include General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower and Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz. The task force held many meetings attended by over 245 witnesses. Its staff of 25 persons engaged in many additional interviews and much research.

"The present system of defense established by the National Security Act of 1947 is a great improvement over what we had before, the task force report declares. The difficulty is that the new system is not yet working well, though steadily improving. 'Today we are organized to calculate our risks,' the report said. 'That in itself is a great advance, the first step toward increased economy and efficiency.'

"Recognizing the need of the Secretary of Defense for assistance on the civilian and military sides, the Committee recommends the creation of a civilian Under Secretary of Defense as the deputy and 'general manager' of the Secretary of Defense, and a Principal Military Assistant to the Secretary of Defense. To expedite decision and action by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, it is recommended that the Secretary of Defense be empowered to appoint its chairman.

"The task force committee recommends strengthening the hand of the Secretary of Defense in these ways: clarifying his statutory authority over the departmental Secretaries and their departments; giving him the right to appoint a Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to aid him in expediting their business and a Principal Military Assistant to aid him in matters essentially military; improving and expediting the ability of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to arrive at decisions and to give the advice for which they are responsible; clothing the Chairmen of the Research and Development Board and the Munitions Board with adequate powers of decision in their respective fields; creating boards and staff agencies in the office of the Secretary, headed by persons with clear authority and responsibility in the fields of the military budget, of personnel policies, of public relations, of legislation, of medical services and hospitalization, and other like matters.

"In urging improved budgetary procedures, the report called for a greater 'sense of cost-consciousness' throughout the armed services and 'a general realization of the vital importance to our national security of the utmost conservation of our resources.'

"At present there are no adequate means for checking, auditing, and controlling at any of the successive stages in the budgeting and appropriating process,' the task force said. 'Better fiscal policies and closer control are required.'

"Establishment of an Office of Controller, reporting to the Secretary of Defense, is proposed by the task force which also recommends: that the Secretary of Defense establish uniform terminology, classifications, budgetary and accounting practices; that a comparable appropriation structure be developed for the three services; that the budget organization of each of the three services be constructed along lines of the budget organization in the office of the Secretary of Defense, and placed under the Secretary or an Assistant Secretary in each case; that the Congress review all authorizations by any of the three services without prior approval of the Secretary of Defense, and that complete and accurate inventories be made and kept current by the Armed Forces. As evidence of the need for closer inventory control, the report points out that today the Army is able to account for only 16,000 of the 25,000 tanks which its records show as having been on hand at the end of the war.

"To induce a greater measure of 'teamwork' in the armed services, the report makes 17 recommendations, Chief of these is 'that more adequate and effective relations be developed at the working level between the appropriate committees of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Joint Staff on the one hand and the National Security Council, Central Intelligence Agency, Research and Development Board, the Munitions Board, and National Security Resources Board on the other hand.' It urges further that the President define and clarify the jurisdiction of the National Security Resources Board, that the Secretary of Defense be the sole representative of the military establishment on the National Security Council, and that the proposed Under Secretary of Defense and the Chairman of the Research and Development Board and of the Munitions Board be added to the war Council.

"The education of officers 'should be more definitely aimed at instilling a greater sense of mutual interdependence' through a military Education and Training Board which would also give attention to 'policies for joint training of the military forces.' The report urges that decision on the current proposal to establish an 'Air Academy' be postponed until a thorough study can be made of the entire field of education of military officers. It also proposes that joint recruiting facilities for the military services be established and that the Secretary of Defense seek out every other means to 'reduce overlaps and duplications within and among the services to the minimum compatible to sound operation.'

"In the field of research and development the report calls for immediate steps to establish closer working relations between the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Research and Development Board. The two should establish a joint weapons systems evaluating group, the report says, to insure that developments in weapons be adequately considered in formulating military strategic plans. The report also proposes that the Research and Development Board should review the budgetary estimates of the three services, relating to research and development.

"The report also makes recommendations on civilian and industrial mobilization and on preparation for new and 'unconventional' warfare. All stand-by mobilization legislation, the report says, should be completed, cleared, submitted and acted upon by Congress immediately. Full responsibility and authority for formulating and executing policy on 'stockpiling' of raw materials for war purposes should be 'focused in the National Security Resources Board or Council.'

"As to 'unconventional' warfare, the report urges that: (a) the civil defense unit should be placed under civilian not military control and the plans for civilian defense prepared in the office of the Secretary of Defense should be cleared with related agencies as promptly as possible, (b) the responsibility for internal security should be clarified and located in one agency, (c) effective means should be instituted promptly to protect against attack by unconventional means, and (d) more vigorous and active attention should be given to psychological warfare.

"Excerpts from the task force committee's summary follow:

"The Committee was particularly concerned by the inadequate liaison that still exists between foreign policy and national military power. Within slightly more than a score of years, at great cost in life and property, we have won two wars, only to lose the peace both times through lack of clear and consistent national policy objectives. But the bitter lesson does not yet seem to have been fully learned. Our foreign and military policies are not yet firmly tied together.

"The Committee found that strategic plans, made without clear guidance of long-term peace aims, were based on assumptions which may or may not be correct; that the military, in other words, were planning how to fight the next war—if this tragedy should occur—without knowing exactly what we would be fighting for.

"National security is still thought of too much in terms of military strength alone. There is still inadequate recognition of the equal, and possibly even greater contributions, to our national security that can and should be made by our political, economical, human, and spiritual resources.

"The Committee also found disturbing inadequacies in our intelligence system. . . . The Committee was particularly concerned over the Nation's inadequacies in the field of scientific and medical intelligence. The vital importance of reliable and up-to-date information in these fields calls for greater efforts than appear to have been devoted to this purpose in the past.

"The Committee's conclusion that a greater measure of centralized authority is required within the military establishment compelled consideration of the question of where this authority should be located. Accepting the basic principle of civilian control over the military forces which has stood throughout our history, the Committee finds that the authority in the military establishment should be placed firmly in the Secretary of Defense.

"The Committee failed to find in the military establishment a sense of cost-consciousness or a general realization of the vital importance to our national security of utmost conservation of our resources. . . . The history of past plenty must yield to the cold realities of present facts; we can no longer attain a reasonable degree of national security unless the philosophy of waste yields to a philosophy of economy.

"The situation in regard to scientific research and development is unsatisfactory. The Research and Development Board has been under highly competent leadership and has done much good work but it has been handicapped by various causes. Sound weapons systems evaluation has so far been impossible to attain because of differences between the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Research and Development Board. This situation must be promptly remedied; if necessary, by the intervention of the Secretary of Defense.

"The Committee finds cause for grave concern in the present status of our plans and programs for mobilization of the Nation's human, material, and spiritual resources in case war should suddenly break upon us.

"The chain of national security is only as strong as its weakest link. We are devoting huge sums to maintenance of our military establishment, to foreign economic cooperation, to the development of atomic energy; we are even drafting our sons to the colors. These sacrifices may prove to have been for naught unless we are prepared promptly and effectively to marshal all of our resources in defense of our national security. The relation of these considerations to efficiency and economy is not remote. As we have learned to our sorrow in two recent experiences, failure to take such steps has proved costly in time, in resources, and in lives.

"The Committee is particularly concerned at the position in regard to the stockpile and stockpile policy. There is urgent need for centralizing responsibility over the stockpile and for correlating stockpile policy with the policies of the Economic Cooperation Administration. More substantial amounts of strategic materials should be obtained from abroad in repayment of the advances now being made by the Economic Cooperation Administration.

As of November 1948 total acquisitions of critical materials for stockpile purposes from this source amounted to 26,000 long tons of rubber, 2,000 tons of sisal, and a moderate quantity of industrial diamonds.

"The Committee records the fact that it has been tremendously impressed by the fine spirit with which particularly the younger officials and officers who appeared before it have accepted the basic principles of the National Security Act and have shown hopeful confidence in working within the framework that it sets up. This seemed to the Committee a point of real importance. It confirmed the Committee's conviction that our national security system rests on solid foundations. The problem now is not how to replace them, but how to build on them—firmly and intelligently."

Fifth Army PIO Chief

Col. Thomas F. Joyce, Inf., has been named to succeed Col. William P. Withers as Director of Information for the Fifth Army. Colonel Joyce served previously as a member of the War Crimes Commission in Japan. Colonel Withers will join the staff of Lt. Gen. Walton H. Walker, Commanding General of the Eighth Army in Japan.

Sports Front

AN Army-wide sports championship program for 1949 to include competition in six major sports, namely, boxing, baseball, basketball, bowling, tennis and golf has been approved by the Department of the Army, Maj. Gen. Russel B. Reynolds, Chief of Special Services, announced 13 Dec. This program includes the addition of three sports not included in 1948 when All-Army competitive events in golf, tennis and boxing were held.

Hosts for the following sports, in accordance with the expressed desires of the commanders concerned, and tentative dates for the tournaments have been decided as follows:

Boxing, Military District of Washington—20-27 Feb.
Basketball, First Army—6-13 March.
Bowling, Fifth Army—24-30 April.
Tennis, Sixth Army—17-23 July.
Golf, Fourth Army—7-13 Aug.
Baseball, Third Army—11-17 Sept.

All military personnel in the United States, its territories and overseas on active duty for a period of 90 days or more are eligible to compete, except those on active duty for short training periods. Professionals are ineligible to compete in boxing. United States military cadets are ineligible to compete in any of these All-Army tournaments.

The rules of the National Collegiate Athletic Association govern Army athletics except in boxing where the Amateur Athletic Union rules govern. When the National Collegiate Athletic Association has no rules for a particular sport, the Amateur Athletic Union rules or the rules of the special governing body will be in effect.

The Quantico Marines defeated the football team representing the San Diego Marine Corps base 21-0 on 11 Dec. to win the all-Navy football championship. This marked the second consecutive year that the Quantico Marines have won the world title.

The Quantico gridlers now have won 24 straight games. For the San Diego eleven, it was the first defeat in 16 starts.

Capt. Howard Caldwell, U.S.N., classmate, former teammate, and life-long friend of Capt. Thomas J. Hamilton is slated to relieve him as Director of Athletics, U. S. Naval Academy, upon the latter's retirement. During the past year, Captain Caldwell, head of an Academic Department at the Naval Academy, also served as officer representative for football, in which capacity he was closely associated with Coach George Sauer and the Navy varsity football squad.

Captains Hamilton and Caldwell played together in the Navy backfield as midshipmen and in their last year the Navy team won the National Football Championship in 1926.

They returned to Annapolis after graduation and served as assistant coaches during the 1927 season. Captain Caldwell served also as coach of the Junior Varsity during football seasons 1934, 1935 and 1936 when Captain Hamilton was head coach of the Navy Varsity.

Captain Caldwell also has a long and distinguished athletic career in the Fleet, coaching USS Mississippi teams and playing and coaching with the U. S. Fleet teams on the Pacific Coast in 1931, 1932 and 1933.

He has an outstanding service and war record. As a naval aviator he commanded the Saratoga Air Group during 1943-1944. His service both as an air group commander and air officer aboard the Saratoga resulted in several decorations including the Navy Cross.

It will be recalled that Captain Caldwell commanded a tender and attached aircraft which participated in the Navy's last Antarctic expedition and that he and his plane crew survived a plane crash and were lost for two weeks in the frozen wastes of Antarctica.

Army and AF Enlistments
